THE WEATHER.

U. S. Department of Agriculture,
Weather Bureau,
Toledo, O., Nov. 22, 1892.

The storm central over the lakes yesterday has passed out of the country over the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Another area of low pressure is developing over the North Pacific coast, but as yet has caused no change in the general weather conditions over that section of the country.

The area of high pressure has increased in intensity and now dominates the weather over the entire country; the barometer is decidedly above the normal in all sections, and reads as high as 30.98 inches north of Minnesota. This high area will move slowly eastward, and will cause generally fair weather over the entire country east of the Rocky mountains during the next 48 hours.

The temperature has fallen in all sections of the country except over the extreme northwest and southwest, where it has risen slightly. The temperature is 22 degrees below zero at St. Vincent this morning, and freezing weather extends as far south as Mississippi and eastward to the Atlantic coast. The cold wave will continue until to-morrow, after which it will begin to grow slowly warmer.

During the past 24 hours light snows have fallen over the lake region, elsewhere the weather has been fair.

Local forecast for Toledo and vicinity—On Tuesday and Wednesday fair, continued cold.

AFFLICTED.

Upper Sandusky, O., Nov. 22.—The family of Isaac Miller, residing at Sycamore, a short distance north of here, is sorely afflicted. The family numbers 14, including the parents, and every one of them has got the diphtheria. There were two deaths in the family within the past week.

Hon. D. D. Hare, congressman-elect from this district, is visited daily by large delegations of enthusiasts who are after plums under the new administration. Postoffices seem to be their one ambition.

MANSLAUGHTER.

London, Nov. 22.—The jury in the case of George B. Cooper, tried at Douglas, Isle of Man, for the murder of his wife, Edith Cooper, brought in a verdict of manslaughter and Cooper was sentenced to penal servitude for 10 years. The prisoner seemed relieved by the verdict, as there was a general impression that he might be found guilty of murder.

CHOLERA.

Brussels, Nov. 22.—Four cases of cholera are reported here. Some anxiety is beginning to be felt, but the health authorities are confident that there will be no spread of the disease.

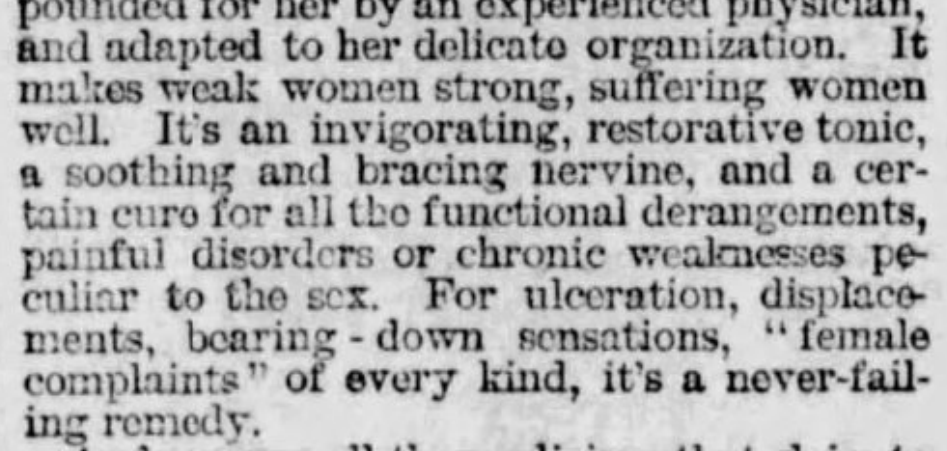
A strong, healthy woman instead of a tired and ailing one! Sounds like a miracle, doesn't it? But it isn't. It's only the ordinary, every-day work of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—just the work that it was made for.

It's a woman's medicine, carefully compounded for her by an experienced physician, and adapted to her delicate organization. It makes weak women strong, suffering women well. It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and bracing nervine, and a certain cure for all the functional derangements, painful disorders or chronic weaknesses peculiar to the sex. For ulceration, displacements, bearing-down sensations, "female complaints" of every kind, it's a never-failing remedy.

And, among all the medicines that claim to help women, "Favorite Prescription" is the only one that's guaranteed to do what is promised for it. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in any case, you have your money back.

Is something else, that may pay the dealer better, likely to be "just as good" for you?

WAGON LOADS!



You see our wagons every day in every part of the city delivering great loads of Furniture, Carpets, Stoves and Household goods. You see them oftener and better loaded than those of all our competitors together. We mention this as a pointer to you, that as sure as people come to our store and get our prices and terms they are satisfied; they buy. Our terms, prices and goods are the best to be had.

973.

Sam Taylor Pulled Through by a Few Votes

In the Rock-Ribbed State of Ohio.

Col. "W. A. T." Proved Himself a Sprinter.

Seward the Only Democratic Elector Chosen.

The Official Pluralities on the Balance of the Ticket Has Not Yet Been Determined.

Columbus, O., Nov. 22.—The secretary of state now has all the returns from the late election complete, except the vote on the state ticket in Fayette county. This has not been officially returned, but the exact figures have been ascertained.

The total vote, according to figures prepared by Col. Poorman, was 854,203, or an increase over four years ago of nearly 10,000 votes. It is more than 40,000 short of the figure republicans had calculated on, and the reasonable supposition is that nearly, if not quite that many voters, took so little interest in the election that they remained away from the polls.

The totals on presidential electors give Danford, republican, a plurality of 1,074 over Seward, democrat, and that will be accepted as the republican plurality in the state.

Danford ran 2,476 ahead of the other presidential electors on the republican ticket, whom Seward, democratic presidential elector, beats by a plurality of 1,402.

S. M. Taylor ran behind the presidential ticket in more ways than one, his plurality over W. A. Taylor, democratic candidate for secretary of state, being 973.

The pluralities of other candidates cannot be figured out for some time yet.

From Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, Nov. 22.—The official vote of Ohio at the election Nov. 8, or enough to make a record for future reference, is as follows:

Presidential electors: Danford (rep.), 405,187; other republican candidates, 402,709. Seward (dem.), 404,113; other democratic candidates, 401,461. People's, 14,818. Prohibitionist, 26,007.

S. M. Taylor (rep.), for secretary of state, 402,545; W. A. Taylor (dem.), for secretary of state, 401,454. The official footings on the remaining electoral candidates have not been completed, and it is not yet known who is the luckless republican defeated by Mr. Seward.

WAS GAME TO THE LAST

Nineteen-Year-Old Robber on Trial.

He Refuses to Ask His Father for Assistance and Will Take the Consequences.

Chihuahua, Mex., Nov. 22.—Ernest Wright, 19 years of age, the son of a prominent and wealthy citizen of Kansas City, Mo., is on trial in the district court here upon the charge of robbery.

The accused came to Mexico about 18 months ago and secured a position with the Mexican Central railroad. He performed his duties faithfully and was soon promoted to the position of baggagemaster of a railroad in this city.

About three months ago there was begun a series of systematic robberies of trunks and other pieces of baggage that passed over the road. Detectives were soon at work on the case and fastened the gilt on Wright, who was immediately imprisoned.

Five thousand dollars' worth of jewelry, ornaments and silks were recovered.

The stolen property was secreted in a deserted jackall.

On the day of his arrest he escaped from the jail, but was recaptured after a chase of 50 miles. The Mexican law is very severe, and young Wright will probably receive a long term in prison. He refuses to ask his father for assistance or let him know of his trouble.

A RUNAWAY TRAIN

Crashes Into Another at Hartley, Ia.

Two Men Killed and Two More So Badly Injured That They Will Die.

Sioux City, Ia., Nov. 22.—The conductor of a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul train left a caboose and fifteen loaded cars standing on the top of the heavy grade, near Hartley, Ia., yesterday morning, while the train crew with the engine went to do someswitching.

In the caboose were five members of a brigde gang sleeping. None of the brakes on the detached cars were set and the wind blew them back over the grade, and when near Everly, the cars crashed into a rapidly moving freight train.

The engineer and fireman jumped and escaped injury. The caboose and all the cars piled up over the engine, completely burying it, and the wreck, in which were two cars of coal, took fire.

The men in the caboose were unable to esape from it, and Daly Stephenson was dead when taken from the wreck.

J. Stephenson was burned and crushed and will die.

The other men were rescued from the, but are badly hurt, although it is thought they will recover.

DIHTHERIA EPIDEMIC.

Indianapolis, Nov. 22.—Diphtheria is epidemic in the northern portion of the city, and yesterday public schools Nos. 10 and 27 wer eclosed, the disease having assumed such a virulent form and so many cases being reported that the school board ordered the schools closed. In the last week 19 case with two deaths have occurred, and in less than a month fifty cases with 13 deaths have been reported in the territory from which the schools draw their patronage.

LIMA NATIONAL.

Lima, O., Nov. 22.—(Special)—O. L. Hays, receiver of the Lima National bank, is in the city winding up the aairs off the bank. Depositors will be paid in full and the stockholders will lose but little. As soon as the comptroller of the currency gives the required authority the receiver will complete his work.

POWDERLY.

He Waited a Long Time to Deny the Item.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 22.—Terence V. Powderly, general master workman of the Knights of Labor, has submitted to the first interview he has given on some of the questions that are agitating workingmen. He was very emphatic in his statements, some of which are herewith given verbatim:

"What is your opinion of the Homestead trouble?"

"The Homestead troubles are as much the result of obstinacy and a desire to rule without question as anything else. Mr. Frick is overbearing and tyrannical. Mr. Carnegie is in Europe, studying the conditions of labor there, and reports his findings to Mr. Frick with instructions, no doubt, to go as far toward establishing similar relation in this country. I regret that the Amalgamated association does not constitute a branch of the Knights of Labor. Our relations, however, are very friendly."

"What do you think of the labor situation in the country to-day?"

"It was never better. The recent election proves that. It was proved that Harrison and Cleveland were as good but no better than in 1888. But the impression that Carnegie, and I speak of him as representing a class, was the real opponent of Cleveland, caused hundreds of thousands who never before gave a thought to such a question, to change their votes. That act demonstrated that they are thinking. They will continue to think and in 1896 will have found the democratic party no better than the republican party and will then turn to the people's party—the only friend that offers relief. It now makes a democrat mad to call him a free trader. The party stole into power under false pretences and the people will oust them in 1896.

"The statement made before the election that I was a protectionist was a lie out of whole cloth," added Mr. Powderly by way of reflection.

"What is the principal legislation the Knights of Labor desire from the national congress?"

"Restriction of immigration. Restriction of rail and telegraph lines under the right of eminent domain to the care of the people. The initiative and referendum, so far as it can be applied, in national legislation. The taxing of all lands to their full value for use, and such other matters as the general assembly may direct."

NEWS FROM THE FLOODS

Late Reports Make the Damage Greater.

Small Rivers Turned Into Vast Lakes.

Additional Information from the Inundation in the Northwest.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 22.—Reports of the storm throughout the state are still worse to-day and the prospects are that rail communication will be abandoned for several days at least. A number of additional deaths are also reported as a result of the floods, while the loss of property in the shape of farm buildings carried away and wrecked will make a very formidable showing in the valleys of Duwamish, White, Green, Black, Stuck, Cedar and Puyallup. The rivers to the southward of Snohomish, the Still, Aguamish and Skagit, northward, are vast lakes.

In the Stuck valley, far as the eye can see, the valley is a seething lake on which logs, shingle bolts, wrecked buildings, railroad ties, uprooted trees and debris are jammed together, ten to twenty feet deep and it is feared that the new county bridge wil be carried away.

In Chehalis county, near Elma, the Northern Pacific railway bridge, on the Grays harbor branch is so weak that trains dare not cross until the high water recedes. Additional washouts on the Northern Pacific main line between Seattle and Tacoma, and on the Portland route, are reported, and no trains have arrived to-day or are liable to arrive for several days. Long trestles have also been washed out.

The same state of affairs is reported on all other lines. There were several more landslides reported yesterday. To add to the already bad condition of the roads, there have been several wrecks.

In valleys and along the railroads water covers the tracks in many places for long distances to the depth of ten feet. The Great Northern railroad will not be able to run trains until the bridges have been repaired, the slides removed and the track renewed.

The Seattle, Lake Shore & Eastern railroad runs trains to the international boundary but transfers must be made around the slide at Blackman.

Three or four steamers have been reported sunk in the Snohomish river, but no lives are reported to have been lost.

Large steamers are carrying passengers to Whatcom to make connections with the railroad.

The damage to the agricultural districts will amount to many hundreds of thousands of dollars. It certainly has been the worst rainfall that has ever been experienced on the Puget Sound, and the rain having set in again, it is liable to cause additional loss. Several additional small towns along the railway lnes are under water and some single-story houses are entirely submerged. It is believed when telegraphic communication is resumed the reports will come in from the worst flooded localities of many lives having been lost and much stock killed. Though no information has yet been received the Skykomish valley will doubtless suffer the same as the others, and the valleys of the mining districts will meet with similar disaster.

Another train wreck is reported on the Seattle & Northern railroad up the Skagit valley, through the running on water covered track, but no lives have been reported lost. Kittikas county will sustain a heavy loss in destruction of the bridges over the Yakima river, and other counties are sure to be seriously damaged by the floods.

Reports from British Columbia are to the effect that the valleys in that country have met with a similar disaster.

THE MILITARY BILL.

Emperor William Wants It to Go Through.

He Opens the Reichstag in Person to Give Strength to the Measure.

New York, Nov. 22.—A London dispatch says that the Emperor William officiated in person to-day at the opening of the reichstag in Berlin, his action being based upon his determination to emphasize the argument in favor of the military bill.

The populace lined the route from the palace to the houses of parliament, and the emperor, who rode on horseback with a detachment of cavalry as escort, was given a hearty reception. Contrary to expectation Prince Bismarck did not make his appearance in the chamber.

SUICIDE.

New York, Nov. 22.—John Raddford, an English, painter, committed suicide at his home here this morning.

BI-METALLISTS,

They Are Already in the Political Field,

And Are Preparing for a Grand Struggle.

People Being Educated on the Money Question.

A Letter From Chairman A. J. Warner.

The Republican Policy of Protection is Put Down as a Delusion and a Snare.

New York, Nov. 22.—The Herald's Washington special says: The bi-metallists have already taken the field. They claim to be preparing for the elections two and four years hence, respectively.

Gen. A. J. Warner, president of the bi-metallist league, issued a circular yesterday entitled "The Coming Issue." In it the republican policy of tariff protection is reviewed, and the point is made that the effort to protect the home market exclusively for home producers has not resulted in general prosperity, but, on the contrary, has engendered monopoly, has not prevented the continued fall in prices nor relieved the mass of the people from the evils of increasing debt and taxes caused by the continued increase in the money standard.

The circular then proceeds to explain why the effort of the coming administration will also prove futile in the direction of bringing prosperity to all. The evil,it say, cannot be cured by tariff reform or a protective tariff. The only remedy is to stop the increase in the value of money.

Gen. Warner's address closes with this paragraph:

"The next issue, therefore, will be the money question. Nor will this issue be long delayed. Its suppression by the two leading parties in the campaign just closed did not settle it.

"The people are being educated on the money question faster than the politicians think. Now is the time for bi-metallism to organize and push to the front the issue of free bi-metallic coinage."

TYPHOID FEVER.

The City of St. Louis in the Grasp of Typhoid Fever.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 22.—There is no longer a doubt that this city is in the clutches of a typhoid fever epdimeic. There have been 1,100 cases reported to the board of health since April 1, but only recently have they been developing rapidly enough to alram the officials. One of the leading physicians and bacteriologists of th ecity said yesterday that the typhoid is a forerunner of cholera, which we are sure to have next year. He advances scientific reasons for his belief. Citizens attribute the visitation to sanitary regulations, and it may result in a thorough investigation and overhauling of the health department.

UNREST OF EUROPE,

France Presents the Scene of Most Dramatic Interest.

Forty Thousand Children Go Breakfastless to School.

Horseshoes Made of Aluminum—Gossip of a Continent.

London, Nov. 22.—The masses and not the classes have been the actors upon the European stage of events the past week. An alarmist would find something portentous in all the scenes of the play in England. The greatest national industry is crippled by the spread of the cotton strike and the augmented army of the unemployed in London is more than ever threatening in its demands. In Ireland, always hungry, the cry for bread is rising to a higher and shriller note. In Germany the social democracy in national convention is framing its creed in the peremptory language of conscious power. In Spain rise continued murmurings of popular discontent, which found more violent expression a few days ago. In France a time-serving ministry, tottering under attacks of a many-sided opposition, is offering to sacrifice the country's most illustrious citizen, now bowed down with years, as the price of its own official salvation.

It is the last scene which possesses the greatest dramatic interest, and France again commands attention as the unique and most fascinating figure among the world's actors. A week ago few among French politicians believed that the present ministry would survive another seven days. Three great dangers threatened its immediate destruction, and it seemed more a question whence would come the coup de grace than of a possible escape from all. One peril only has yet been met, though a second has been provided for. The sessions of the chamber of deputies, where the battle has been waging for the past four days, have been among the most exciting in the history of the republic. The press laws, which have been the nominal subject of contention, were scarcely mentioned during the first two days. Instead, the tribune of the chamber became the forum of the new socialistic faith which has swept over the nation. The orators of the new religion, for such it is to them, must be given the credit of most persuasive eloquence. But they are not united; they are divided into at least four sections, varying in their ideas from the milder theories of the Christian socialists to the revolutionists of the Baudin type.

The two great speeches of the debate were Count de Mun's plea against the banishment of Christianity from the nation and Prime Minister Loubet's masterly defense of the government. De Mun is a Christian socialist. Most eloquently did he offer the cabinet the support of his followers if it would abandon its policy of crushing out all religion in France. The danger to the nation, he affirmed, was the spread of atheism, fostered by the government, among the masses. M. Loubet distinctly rejected De Mun's offer, declaring that the latter mistook religious neutrality for religious oppression. The utmost disorder and excitement prevailed at brief intervals throughout the four sessions. The fate of the cabinet plainly wavered from hour to hour.

Loubet's Triumph.

It became apparent, finally, that Loubet's success would depend upon seizing a favorable moment for putting his fate to the test. He dared not, however, bring the press bill to vote in the form in which it was offered by the government. Had he done so he would assuredly have been defeated. He made up his mind yesterday to submit to such modifications of its provisions as the majority of the chamber demanded. Then, seizing a moment when the sympathies of the deputies were with him, he moved last evening to consider the bill by sections, and in making the motion gave notice that the result of it would be accepted as a vote of confidence. His majority of 100 exceeded his most sanguine expectations.

When the measure was considered in detail at this evening's session, the ministry so far receded from its position as to accept an amendment which makes it impossible for a public prosecutor to secure the imprisonment of an accused editor before trial, except by a magistrate's commitment. In this form the bill was passed.

There remains the Panama affair, which is scarcely a cabinet danger now, and the Swiss commercial treaty, to put before the mecurial chamber.

The Panama Canal Scandal.

The prosecution of M. De Lesseps and his associates is a matter of even greater interest than the fate of Loubet's cabinet. It is going to result in the greatest financial scandal the world has ever seen. The vague rumors of gigantic corruption with which the air has been filled since the grand collapse four years ago will now be exploited on the witness stand and in parliamentary debate. Some astounding revelations will probably be made on the floor of the chamber next week.

A Specimen Case.

One of the most authentic reports of the class of affairs to be judicially investigated is the following: A young man just graduated from the Paris Polytechnic School went to Panama with a capital of 500 francs. He obtained a contract for excavating a portion of the canal at 30 francs per cubic metre, the total proceeds being 16,000,000 francs. He sub-let contract at the rate of 7 francs per metre. The sub-contractor, in turn, got a third to take the job at 5 francs per metre, and he finally hired a master of Chinese laborers to do the work at 2 1-2 francs.

It is such reports of extravagance and waste, to use mild terms, which have kept alive the bitterness of many thousand small investors, whose savings were swept away and who still demand legal revenge.

De Lesseps Will Resign.

The Paris Eclair states that M. Ferdinand De Lesseps will resign the chairmanship of the Panama Canal company when the summons in the action of the government against the directors of the company is served on him. The Eclair adds that M. Leon Say will succeed M. De Lesseps.

The Case of Gwyneth Maude.

At the inquest upon the remains of Mrs. Maude, who jumped from a hotel window because of the arrest of her young daughter Gwyneth, for swindling various firms in London, A. E. Maude, a dress manufacturer in the West End, testified that the deceased was his wife. They had not lived together for the past seven years. He last saw his wife on Thursday, when he visited her at her request. He found her much changed and ill. He had heard her threaten to commit suicide. When he saw her she was greatly troubled about her daughter Gwyneth, and blamed herself entirely for the latter's unfortunate position.

H. H. Myers, a solicitor, testified that Mrs. Maude had consulted him in regard to her daughter. Mrs. Maude was distracted by the arrest of Gwyneth. She stated that she had instigated her daughter to obtain on credit the articles that were subsequently pawned, and said she wished to take Gwyneth's place in the prisoners' dock.

Fifty Thousand Breakfastless Children.

There are 40,000 little children in London who go breakfastless to school every morning. This is the saddest feature of the great unemployed problem which agitates the metropolis. The matter has been urgently brought before the school board this week by delegates from the idle workingmen, with the request that the city should fill the stomachs as well as the brains of the little ones, whose attendance it compels. The subject had already been semi-officially investigated, and the appalling figures, which are daily growing, were found to be substantially correct. It is also stated that a wholesome porridge can be provided at a cost of only one-half penny per child.

Amalgamation of Steamship Lines.

A new joint stock company has been formed in Liverpool to take over and extend the business of the Leyland steamship line. The transaction practically amounts to the amalgamation of the Leyland and Furness lines, or at any rate the cessation of competition between them. The Leyland fleet consists of 23 cargo steamers, for which about £650,000 is to be paid. Seven of the largest steamers run between Liverpool and Boston, and the remainder are engaged in the Mediterranean traffic. Frederick Dawson Leyland will be in the board of the company.

Horseshoes of Aluminum.

Russia has tried an experiment with aluminium shoes for cavalry horses, which will, no doubt, prove especially interesting to the owner of Nancy Hanks, and other flyers. A few horses in the Finland dragoons were shod with one aluminium shoe and three iron ones, the former being on the forefoot in some cases and on the hind in others. The experiment lasted six weeks, and showed that the aluminium shoes lasted longer and preserved the foot better than the iron ones. No aluminium shoe broke and they were used over again for re-shoeing. The horses, moreover, were worked over hard and very stony ground. The most important fact of all is that aluminium horseshoes are only one-third to one-fourth the weight of iron shoes.

A Preacher Dies in Prison.

Rev. James C. Clutterbuck, who was serving a four-year sentence for obtaining money by false pretenses, died in prison of syncope. He was one of the inspectors of workhouse schools, and pleaded guilty to the charge of obtaining £35,000 from persons to whom he represented that he had an influence with members of the government. Most of Clutterbuck's gains were lost in stock speculation.

Poisoned a Priest at the Altar.

The Chronicle's Rome correspondent says that the trial is in progress at Palermo of two peasants who wreaked their vengeance on a priest by pouring a solution of corrosive sublimate into the chalice which the priest used at mass. The priest died on the altar steps.

Hot Times at an Eviction.

Recently a sheriff's party and 20 policemen went to evict Care-Taker Murphy, near Kanture, County Cork. They found the crops trampled down, the trees in the orchard uprooted and the house barricaded. The inmates kept the party at bay for two hours with red hot irons and boiling water. The bailiffs, having finally effected an entrance, had to fight their way from room to room, and eventually succeeded in arresting eight persons. Many of the bailiffs and policemen were burned and scalded.

KILLED FOR SIXTY DOLLARS.

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 22.—Sunday morning, near Housley, in Dallas county, Wm. R. Anderson, a crippled farmer, was assassinated by some one thrusting a pistol through the window near his bed and firing two shots into his head, killing him instantly. Two shots were also fired at his wife as she fled, but did not take effect. The assassin then robbed the house of $60 and escaped. No clew to the murderer.

TAKEN INTO COURT.

Tiffin, Nov. 22.—The labor trouble at the National Machinery works, in this city, culminated in the arrest of William R. Anderson, president and manager of the National Machinery company, for violating a statute making it unlawful for an employer to discharge an employe for joining a labor organization.

PAT EGAN.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 22.—Patrick Egan, minister to Chili, was tendered a complimentary banquet at the Hotel Lincoln, last night, by John Fitzgerald, ex-president of the Irish National League of America.

MONETARY CONFERENCE

Its Labors Have Commenced in Brussels.

The Most Important Meeting in Years.

Wise Men of Several Lands Get Together to Discuss the Coin of the World.

New York, Nov. 22.—(Special)—A dispatch from Brussels says: The international monetary conference opened here to-day. It is one of the most important international conventions of recent years, and the outcome of its deliberations will be anxiously awaited in financial circles the world over.

No formality attended the assembling of the delegates, although a large crowd assembled on the outside of the state department for the purpose of catching a glimpse at the distinguished men from abroad as they left their carriages and ascended the marble steps. The large audience chamber of the department had been selected for the purposes of the gathering, and the delegates arrived in twos and threes and were made en rapport one with another.

The delegates from the United States were late in arriving. Senator Allison, of Iowa, and Congressman McCreary of Kentucky, came in together, and President Andrews of Brown University, Senator Jones, of Nevada, and Hon. H. W. Cannon, of New York, came in soon after.

The other nations represented were England, France, Germany, Italy, Austria-Hungar, Denmark, Belgium, the Netherlands, Greece, Roumania, Portugal, Spain, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland, and Norway.

The delegates from Canada had not put in an appearance at this writing. The German delegation was a distinguished one, comprising Count von Alvonsleben, the German minister to Belgium, Dr. von Glasenap, chief of the imperial treasury department, and Herr Hertung, director of the Reichbank. Belgium was represented by Superintendent Saintlette of the national mint, M. Montefiore Levy, one of the leading bankers of the country, and M. Allard, one of the directors of the mint. The Italian delegation was headed by Dominico Zeppa.

The French delegates were M. Tirard, ex-minister of finance, M. Lirondalrolle, director of the mint, and M. Foville, an official of the French ministry.

The delegates were welcomed by M. Beermaert, prime minister and minister of finance, and having performed that duty he excused himself from further attendance for the time being on account of pressing business in the chamber of deputies.

Delegate Cannon of the United States was made temporary chairman, pending a formal organization. It was announced by the English delegate that in accordance with instructions from Sir William Vernon Harcourt, chancellor of the exchequer, they would regard the conference as a purely deliberative body, and would be without power to commit their government to any position that the majority might desire to take. The American delegates were then invited to state the proposals they desired submitted for discussion, and a committee was appointed to prepare a definite plan of procedure.

FATAL EXPLOSION.

Miners Killed and Injured Down in West Virginia.

A Fizzing Fuse Causes Sorrow in Many Homes—The Killed and Wounded.

Steubenville, Nov. 22.—Twenty-five kegs of powder exploded almost simultaneously at the Blanche coal mine at the west end of the Colliers, W. Va., yard. The explosion and flame scattered death among the miners at work. The explosion occurred at 12:15 o'clock yesterday, just when the men were returning from dinner. This was providential, for had it occurred ten minutes later nearly every home at the mines would have carried crape.

The explosion was caused by a fizzing fuse carrying fire into a miner's powder can, and the flame set fire to other cans stored there. The men have had powder stolen and kept it in boxes, which were open at the dinner hour. After the explosion the scene at the mouth of the mine was heartrending. Wives and mothers were there begging the men not to go in where death lurked, until the air was clear. The mine boss and several others ventured in and brought out the following killed:

JOHN PIASKY.

WESLEY ANDERSON, colored.

MIKE COHOKER, wounded.

WM. ANDERSON, colored, leg broken, hip dislocated, and face mutilated. He was going in the mouth of the mine at the time of the explosion, was blown 50 feet over the trestle, and will die.

JOHN ANDERSON, colored, going in the mine, also blown out on the trestle and had his head wedged under a coal car.

LAWRENCE CAMPBELL, colored, burned about the arms, back and head.

JOHN GAZING, burned about the head and arms; taken to Pittsburg hospital.

JOHN GILLESPIE, lately from Akron; burned internally.

ED COOK, colored, burned about the head and back; will die.

MATTHEW WRIGHT, burned about the head and back.

GEORGE TEETERS, injured internally.

JOHN RAMSAY, burned about the head and arms.

That more were not suffocated is due to the presence of mind of James Clark and James Borden, who shut the outside door to the shaft, which was blown off its hinges. The works belong to L. C. Smith, of New Cumberland, and Wm. Smith and John McNutt, of Wellsville. About fifty men were employed in the mine, which has been in operation since May, 1890. Two men were injured there a year ago by a powder explosion, while about the same time a boy named Ward, on a wager, smoked on a can of powder and is still missing. Wesley Anderson, who was killed, was going into the mine and was blown 100 yards over a trestle. John Hally, a miner, is still missing.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Life of an Entire Family Blotted Out.

The House Took Fire and They Perished in the Flames.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 22.—The lives of one entire family were blotted out by fire early this morning.

The dead are:

Hiram Danahaur, aged 45 years.

Mrs. Danahaur, aged 43.

Their daughter, aged 10 years.

The Danahaur family lived in Pleasant Valley, Ohara township, just outside of the town of Sharpsburg.

They had a greenhouse in the basement of their home and placed a furnace in it yesterday. It is presumed that the furnace became overheated, setting fire to the woodwork. The family died before their neighbors knew of their danger.

When the fire was discovered the house had been burned to the ground, and the charred remains of father, mother and daughter were found among the ruins. Danahaur was a tinner by occupation and quite well connected.

JACK AND MARION

Catch the Folks at Wheeler's In Great Shape.

A Perfect Performance and a Delighted Audience—Other Attractions at the Theaters.

Too much cannot be said in praise of the work of Marion Manola, John Mason and their excellent company at Wheeler's last evening. As they appear again this evening, those who care to witness a performance, first-class in every respect, will be afforded that pleasure. Last evening a double bill was presented. A curtain raiser, The Army Surgeon, by Stanislaus Stange, who appeared as the surgeon, was first presented. It was a clever bit and when it was concluded, the audience knew they were not witnessing a company of players of the Mr. Potter, of Texas, No. 2 style. Those present desired to see more of Mr. Stange, but unfortunately he did not appear in the second piece, "If I Were You." He is the author also of "The Man About Town," and is the stage manager of Mason-Manola company.

"If I Were You" is a bright, clean, three act comedy, by William Young, author of the Rajah. Marion Manola, as Doies, was a creation, decidedly new, fresh and delightfully acceptable. John Mason was equally clever. They have been dubbed the Kendals of America. The appelation flatters Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, if anything, for the two young Americans can give them a few pointers. The solos by Miss Manola, so aptly bright, were charmingly rendered. And the duet with Mr. Mason captured the house. Junius B. Booth, as Lieut. Lumly Beauchamp of the Skeleton Brigade, was very, very funny, if such excellent comedy work can be called by the common term "funny." At any rate it was a very refined, good quality of "funny." Robert McWade, who is well-known and a favorite here, played Major Fyrie of the Highladders, in the finished manner that always characterizes his work. Hattie E. Schell, as Philopoena, was also bright, easy, natural. Edward P. Temple, as Sir Timothy, was good. There should be a large audience again this evening.

The Wonderland Bill.

The cowboy pianist, O. A. Babel, does some good work at the Wonderland. He gets music out of a piano in a very original manner. Mattie Babel, who plays on a $3,000 cornet, is also a clever musician. Herman, the strong man, is a feature in the musee. In the theater are Roths, duettests; Kaneka, Japanese juggler; Law Randall, vocalist and dancer; Chas. G. Kilpatrick, who gives a performance on a bicycle, with one leg only to do it with, that would down a good many two legged riders; the Sisters Orlando, fantistic dancers, and the LaRose brothers, wonderful trick tumblers. The show is a very good one throughout. The Zublins were missed from the bill, which was a disappointment to their numerous friends here.

Rhea's Two Performances.

That gifted and charming actress M'lle Rhea will present at the Wheeler on Thanksgiving evening, Victorian Sardou's finest comedy "Princess Andrea." Rhea's is the truest type of art which has come to us yet from the country of the passionate stage, and it is presented with the accompaniments of the rarest gifts of voice and personal beauty. M'lle Rhea is as charming socially as she is brilliant as an actress. Using the words of a very accomplished lady of Detroit writing to us, of her "in conversation she is so natural and simple and yet withal, her charming French manners seem to blend so perfectly as to make her even doubly fascinating. Her face is so full of expression it seems to be almost transparent. The part of Andrea is as true an ideal as our stage has witnessed. Rhea's shade and light is admirably adopted to the loving and merry Andrea, she possesses marvellous faculty of expressing the varying moods of Sardou's flexible character. At the matinee a notable revival of the most successful historical drama "Josephine" will be given with new costumes and tableau effects.

At the People's.

Under the Lion's Paw was presented at the People's last evening to a large and enthusiastic audience. The scenery was a feature of the performance, but it was not the only one. The performing lions exhibited by Col. Boon and Millie Carlotta were wonderful. It is a powerful modern melodrama. The plot is a most interesting one, with strong dramatic situations and startling climaxes. The action takes place at Long Branch, in the Circus Royal business offices, in the Circus Royal menagerie tent, parlor of the Hotel Ashley and at the circus winter quarters. The comedy element predominates, but there is also plenty of good, strong work. The piece deserves to do a big business.

RHEUMATISM PREVALENT.

Caused by the Sudden Changes of Temperature.

PEOPLE WHO HAVE FOUND RELIEF.

Rheumatism is more prevalent here than ever before.

When this disease fastens upon an individual with its soreness and pain, swelling the joints, rendering him helpless in his movements, and shattering his usefulness, he is indeed an object of pity.

The slight pain in the back, pain or stiffness of the joints or muscles, is a warning indication of an improvished condition of the blood, a low state of health, and if not attended to at once, means rheumatism.

Rheumatism can now be relieved and cured.

Since the introduction of Favorite Remedy, by Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., there has been fewer sufferers than ever before.

Favorite Remedy drives out rheumatic poison from the blood, restores the circulation, strengthens the nerve power.

The best proof of its value is the good it has done.

"I was afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism for fifteen years, writes Mr. E. P. Tayer, of East Nassau, N. Y. So severe that I was supposed to be a cripple for life. Under physicians treatment I grew worse. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy helped me from the time I first used it, and entirely cured me. Have felt no trace of the disease since, and that was three years ago."

The beautiful daughter of Mr. James Mc Farland, of DeMoines, Ia., was helpless for months with sciatic rheumatism. After a few doses of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, she began to grow better, appetite improved, slept well, and continuing its use, was cured.

"I was confined to my bed with rheumatism near my heart, writes Mr. C. L. Seaver, of Birmingham, Conn., and used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy but a short while before it drove the rheumatism out of my system."

Mr. G. Lansing, of Troy, N. Y., had rheumatism so bad that he had to be turned over in bed. After using Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy but a short while was restored to health.

What reason then for suffering with rheumatism or neuralgia. This medicine will help you if given a trial.

COMMISSIONER BOWER

And His Attorneys Appear in Probate Court

To Defend the Charges Made to Impeach His Official Record.

The impeachment proceedings against Street Commissioner Bower were taken up in probate court this morning.

Mr. Bower is charged with instructing his foreman, Edward Kirkham, to report as working for the city, two men, namely, James Kelly and John Lentner, and to report each week, certain time, and give certain vouchers therefor; that these vouchers were duly cashed by the disbursing officer of the city of Toledo, when in fact for such times neither of these men were working for the city in the department of the street commissioner, and were not entitled to any money of compensation from the city; that the money was not paid to these men, but was collected through other agencies by Henry Bower; that Henry Bower, knowing the vouchers to be fraudulent, caused them to be presented for payment and did divert the funds from the purpose for which they were intended; that Henry Bower has been guilty of gross malfeasance in office.

At 10 o'clock this morning the following named jurors were called to the box: G. W. Ward, F. T. Baldwin, S. S. Hooper, Geo. E. Young, Chas. W. Little, Fred Heyer, sr., C. W. Ferguson, S. W. Cook, Jas. H. Spain, H. A. Williams, John Vollmeyer, J. M. Bell.

Fred Heyer, being one of Mr. Bower's bondsmen, was excused.

DISASTROUS FIRE

At the Miami Children's Home.

The Large Barn With All Its Contents, Including Four Valuable Horses, In Ashes.

Last night about 9 o'clock the large barn belonging to the Miami Children's home was discovered to be on fire, by persons on a passing train.

Neighbors were informed and the inmates of the home awakened, but the flames had gained too great headway to be controlled.

Four valuable horses, and all the other contents of the barn, except two farm wagons and three cows, were destroyed.

The loss is estimated at $4,000, with an insurance of $1,500.

Superintendent Neiss could offer no solution of the mysterious origin of the fire, but thinks perhaps it might have been caused by electric light wires.

The scene was a terrible one, men and women running back and forth, utterly unable to do anything, and the screaming children frantic with fear.

No assistance was called from the city, for before the fire was discovered, it had gained so great headway that all the fire departments in Toledo could have done nothing.

The barn will probably be immediately rebuilt.

GLADYS IN A CONVENT;

Or the Tale of Mrs. Deacon's Daughter.

A Story from Life Which Would Do Justice to a Thirty-Five Cent Novel.

Paris, Nov. 22.—The court of appeals has given a decision substantially in favor of Mrs. Deacon on her appeal from the decision of the tribunal of the Seine, which refused to grant her a divorce from Mr. Edward Parker Deacon, on the alleged ground of cruelty, and has ordered that the child Gladys, abducted by Mrs. Deacon, shall be returned to the convent where she was formerly kept, until a decision of the suit now pending at Grasse and Aix.

This is virtually a triumph for Mrs. Deacon, as Mr. Deacon's object was to get the child into his own possession for removal to America. The child is now to be retained in France, where Mrs. Deacon may yet hope to obtain complete control of her daughter.

Her bold move in abducting the child has therefore been successful in its object.

Certain members of the Abeille family are still at work doing all they can to assist Mrs. Deacon and to obstruct Mr. Deacon in his litigation with his wife.

200,000,000.

The Pension Roll Will Be Life-Size This Fall.

Washington, Nov. 22.—There appears to be more than usual interest attached to the forthcoming annual report of the commissioner of pensions for the reason that the pension appropriation figures conspicuously in the annual budget of the government. It has been pretty well understood for some time past that the estimates for the next fiscal year would show a large increase over any previous year. This expectation was based on the fact that large issue of pensions during the year consequent upon recent pension legislation which admitted to a pensionable status a very large number of soldiers who were not pensionable under the former laws. In a few days the report of General Raum will be completed and a full statement of the condition of the pension office will be presented.

The statement will show that the amount that will be required for pensions during the next fiscal year will nearly reach the enormous sum of $200,000,000. The work of compiling the figures, however, is sufficiently well advanced to show that this estimate is in excess of the actual requirements. Since the passage of the disability bill there has been a rapid increase in the amount needed to pay the pensions. For the year 1890-91 the totaal appropriation on account of pensions was about $125,000,000. Last year there was an increase to $144,000,000. But, as General Raum will state in his report, this amount fell short of the actual demands by about $18,000,000, so that there is a deficiency of that amount. Congress will be asked to make an appropriation of about $180,000,000 for the coming fical year, about $18,000,000 of which is an anticipation of an increase of that amount over the actual expenditures of the last year. It is the judgment of General Raum that while this amount is likely to be increased for the next year or two, yet he feels that the maximum limits are nearly reached.

It is argued that the great bulk of the pension appropriation at present is used in making first payments, carrying arrears and therefore, as soon as the great rush of applications under the disability act is over, a rapid decline in first payments will occur. It is understood that the first payments last year aggregated over $50,000,000, which covered the back pay in the 311,000 cases allowed.

SALVATION ARMY.

Second Day's Session of the Meeting in New York.

New York, Nov. 22.—The second day's session of the National Salvation Army conference at Carnegie hall shows a largely increased attendance, many belated delegates from the far west and from Canada having arrived since the adjournment last night. Altogether over 1,005 cities and towns are represented.

Ways and means of reaching the very poor throughout the country is the topic of discussion for the morning session. This evening the delegates, with the full strength of the local regiments of the order, will turn out in a street parade, and sweep everything before them in the up-town district. Preliminary arrangements are being made for another congress to be held in Chicago, and it is probable that Gen. Booth will cross the Atlantic in order to be present at the gathering in that city.

SANTIAGO.

All Traces of the Revolutionary Plot Are Gone.

New York, Nov. 22.—A Herald special from Santiago says: Everything is quiet in Santiago and it is thought that all traces of the revolutionary plot have been stamped out.

The plot was hatched in the house of Claudio Vicuna, and his son presided over the meetings of the conspirators. It was exposed by a servant woman who was taken sick in Vicuna's house and was removed to the hospital and there gave the information.

Great praise is given to the grenadiers and artillery for their loyalty. The government is blamed for having been too lenient with these men. It is probable that more stringent measures will now be adopted.

WILL JOLLIFY.

Baltimore Will Whoop It Up for the Democracy.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 22.—The result of the recent election will be celebrated by the democracy to-night in a monster meeting in the Cyclorama building, and enthusiastic democrats from pretty well every county in the state are coming in on the morning trains to take their share in the general rejoicing. The entire Maryland delegation to congress is to be marshalled on the platform, and Senator Gorman, ex-Secretary Bayard, and probably Congressman W. Burke Cochran will do the talking.

TO WED A PABST.

William Can Get His Bottled Beer at Cost.

Milwaukee, Nov. 22.—The society of the Cream City will turn out in force to-night at the Immanuel Presbyterian church to witness the nuptials of Miss Marie Pabst, daughter of the millionaire brewer, and Mr. William Osborne Goodrich, of this city. The eldest brother of the bride, Guss Pabst, and whose alleged marriage to Margaret Mather has been creating something of a sensation, arrived here this morning. Whether his alleged wife is also in the city he will not say.

HALF A MILLION.

New York, Nov. 22.—The Herald says: It is reported on good authority that an individual, whose identity for the present is concealed, has signified to Bishop Henry C. Potter his intention of donating $500,000 toward the fund for the building of the new Protestant Episcopal cathedral of St. John the Divine.

You cannot do effective work without a clear head, and for this take Simmons Liver Regulator.

HEAVY LOSS.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 22.—Fire was discovered in the Morning Patriot building early this morning. The interior of the building was entirely burned out. The loss is estimated at from $40,000 to $60,000; partly insured. The morning edition had just been run off when the conflagration took place. Several persons were severely burned.

ONCE MORE.

Powderly Is at the Head of the Knights of Labor.

St. Louis, Nov. 22.—At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon a motion to proceed to elect officers for the ensuing year prevailed. Mr. Powderly was at once placed in nomination for re-election to the office of general master workman. He at once rose to his feet and addressed those present, saying he did not desire a re-election and begged them to select some one else.

In order to leave the delegates free to speak their minds he left the hall while the vote was being taken. A number of delegates spoke, the almost unanimous sentiment being that the order at large demanded and the cause of labor required his re-election.

A secret ballot was taken and Mr. Powderly was chosen by a vote of 102 to 6 scattering. Other officers were selected as follows: General worthy foreman, Hugh Cavanaugh; general secretary-treasurer, John W. Hayes; members of executive board, T. V. Powderly, ex-officio chairman; A. W. Wright, John Devlin, John Davis and T. B. McGuire. All of the foregoing, except McGuire, were re-elected. The latter was a member of the board up to 1888, when he was defeated at Indianapolis. Since 1888 he has been acting as general organizer for the executive board and will probably continue to act in that capacity. The sentiment among the members is unanimous that the newly elected officials are the best that could be selected for the various offices.

ON BARGAIN COUNTERS.

There Are Bargains in Men and Women That Are Fully as Valuable as Those in Dress Goods

Some people are always picking up bargains—genuine more than your money's worth, bits of goods or property—while others again may search and search and when they do find something which they think is dirt cheap and has escaped the regular hunter's eye they learn too late that they have been deceived, and their bargain proves to be no bargain at all, but the biggest sort of a white elephant.

Did it ever occur to you that there are bargains in husbands and wives as well as in dress goods or household furnishings? Take, for instance, the plain, upright but rather unprepossessing man of business, who plods along day in and day out, not overburdened with sentiment, but with a high sense of his obligations to his wife and with a never-ceasing desire to give her every comfort—is he not a much greater matrimonial bargain than the handsome, well-dressed, poetical creature who before marriage professes all sorts of devotion, yet who soon finds time for but one kind and that is to himself? Ah, yes, the former is the all-wool-and-a-yard-wide sort, while the latter is very apt to fade in the hard rubbing of the world's wash day.

Also with wives it is just the same. Very often the highly accomplished, attractive social butterfly, beautiful to look upon, proves not one-half as worthy as the plainer girl, who, not being beautiful, cultivates graces of mind and heart that wear well. One is the cheap, flimsy satin from which the gloss disappears if put to real use; while the other, a well-woven serge, withstands the storms and comes out all the better and brighter for contact with the rough weather.

It is well to be a human bargain hunter, for in many unbeaten paths, in many unfrequented ways, are living men and women who, if once brought out into the light of the great world, would show of what metal they are made and be living examples of the old adage that "all is not gold that glitters."

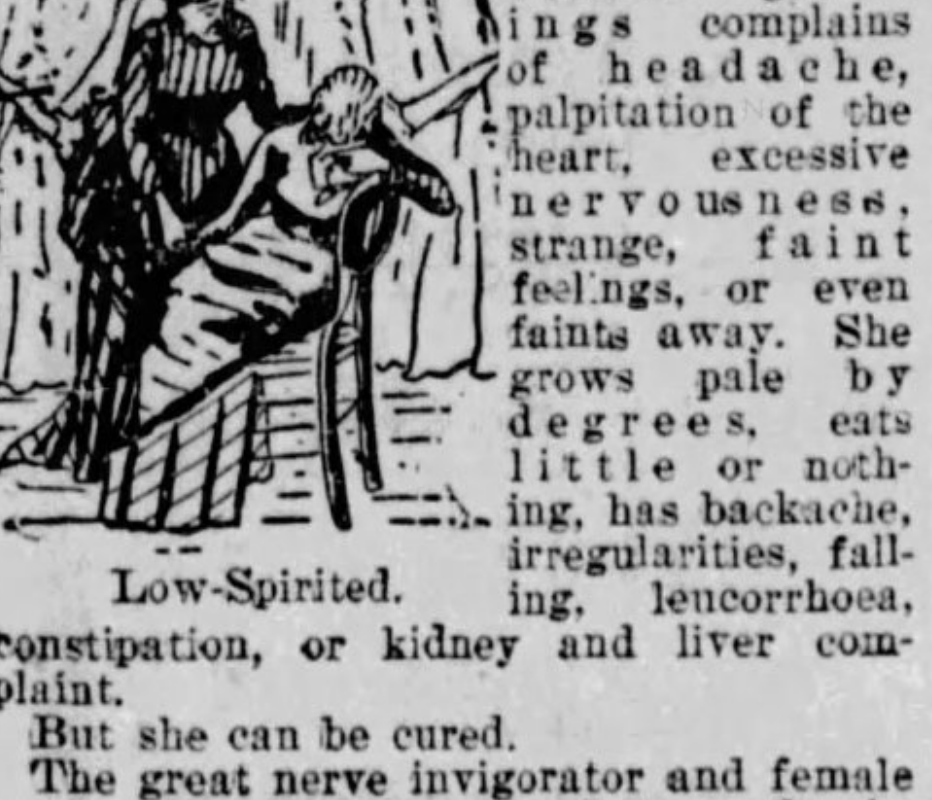
DELICATE GIRLS.

What To Do For Our Young Girls.

What a distressing sight in the home is the girl or young lady, the pride of her father and mother, who is delicate, weak, nervous and unhealthy. She is listless, languid, and complains of being constantly tired. She is no longer cheerful, but is depressed in mind and spirit, weeps apparently without cause, and loses all enjoyment of life. She shrinks from society, or if she attends social gatherings complains of headache, palpitation of the heart, excessive nervousness, strange, faint feelings, or even faints away. She grows pale by degrees, eats little or nothing, has backache, irregularities, falling, leucorrhoea, constipation, or kidney and liver complaint.



Low-Spirited.

But she can be cured.

The great nerve invigorator and female restorative—the great regulator of the system—is Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. All delicate girls and weak and nervous young ladies should take this wonderful remedy. No medicine in the world is so sure to bring back the color to the cheeks, the brilliancy to the eyes, the lightness to the step, the strength and vigor to the weak and unstrung nerves. It is the greatest of all uterine tonics and regulators, and perfectly cures all female weakness. Purely vegetable and harmless. Druggists, $1.00.

"I was suffering from nervousness, caused by female weakness and nervous prostration. I was so nervous and weak I could not go up a common pair of stairs without stopping to rest, and troubled to sleep at night. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and have obtained my old elastic step around the house, to the surprise of my friends. After creeping round for two years, hardly able to do anything, it has proved a boon to me truly.

Mrs. Oliver Wilson,
Northboro, Mass.

An hour was spent in the transaction of routine business and the conferring of the first rank on a stranger, after which tables were spread and the playing of cards taken up, while Vice Chancellor Billy Booth kept on the move furnishing the boys with the best kind of cigars. Music and social conversation also tended to make the occasion one of very pleasant character.

MRS. FLORA

Wants Her Share of a Life Insurance Policy.

In Justice Parker's court this morning, Mrs. Flora, of East Toledo, is having a hearing, in the case of Flora versus Stump.

Mrs. Flora avers that she, at the earnest request of her mother, took care of her at, and prior to her death, and when that event occurred, her sister, Mrs. Stump, claimed the insurance policies, which the mother, Mrs. Katharine Freedenberg, carried in the Prudental and Metropolitan insurance companies.

Mrs. Flora is suing for pay for care given the mother.

The case is having a jury trial and numerous witnesses are being examined.

THE CONSAUL PROPERTY

Adjoining the Collins Tract Purchased for Park Purposes.

A start has been made in the acquiring of property for park purposes in East Toledo. It will be remembered that the late Judge W. A. Collins bequeathed to the city 35 acres for use as a park, provided the city secured a like amount adjacent to the same.

After much dickering with property owners in the vicinity, the park commissioners have finally closed negotiations by which 35 acres of the Consaul farm have been purchased at $400 per acre, or $14,000 for the site. The property is finely situated, and the 70 acres will, when properly laid out, make an excellent park.

Other propositions made by the East Toledo committee are still under consideration, and it is probable that before long the claims of the people over the river will be practically satisfied.

PEACEFUL DEATH

Of Little Bessie Kent, This Morning.

Little Bessie Kent, the daughter of Mrs. Belle Kent, of 420 Tenth street, died this morning at 7:30.

The little girl had for the past two years been a great sufferer from hip disease, and has borne her sufferings with great patience and sweetness.

She was a member of the First Presbyterian Sunday school, and also a member of the Junior Ys, and her little associates have done much to make her painful life bearable.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

TAKE GLOVES ALONG.

The Cold Will Continued To-Night and To-Morrow.

Observer Hanner said this morning of the weather: "The storm area of yesterday over the lakes passed out of the country and is now central over the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Another storm seems to be developing over the north Pacific coast, yet there is no decided change of weather in that section. The area of high pressure has increased in intensity and magnitude and now covers the entire country east of the Rocky Mountains. The barometer is decidedly above the normal in all sections and in central Minnesota reads 30.98 inches. This high wind will dominate the weather over the eastern half of the country during the next 48 hours.

"Light snows have fallen over the lake region. Elsewhere the weather has been fair, and will continue so. The temperature has fallen in all sections of the country except the very extreme northwest and southwest, where it has risen slightly. The temperatrue at St. Vincent this morning was 22 below zero, and the limit of freezing weather extended as far south as Mississippi and eastward to the Atlantic coast. The weather will continue cold to-day and to-morrow and then begin to grow slowly warmer. The temperature here went as low as 24 degrees, and was lower here than at points around us, being 10 degrees lower than at Cleveland. With the high area we are liable to get our lowest temperature to-morrow, instead of this morning."

THE LITTLE JUDGE.

Victims of Police Prowess Before the Court.

Police court docket this morning presented the usual variety of victims of appetite and passion. The drunks were disposed of quickly. Louis Foster, George Jackson and Carrie Decker being each charged the costs, $3.70, and committed to the workhouse till payment. The cavorting Carrie was also fined $5 and costs on conviction of being a common prostitute. Frank Harding and Dan Moore forfeited their bail of $5 each.

Sherman Steel pleaded guilty to shooting a revolver within the city limits and was fined $5 and costs. He was also convicted of carrying concealed weapons and fined $5 and costs. The whole fusilade thus costs him $18.40.

James Croy, charged with neglecting his children, was required to give bond in $100 to maintain his family.

Light Fingered Folk.

O. C. Simmons, charged with stealing $3.70 from Ed. Sullivan, in a St. Clair street boarding house, had his case continued till to-morrow.

George Gampher, Frank Teneyck, Orrin Teneyck and Charles Schlagel, arrested yesterday for stealing coal to the value of 60 cents, from Beeman's yard, back of the Oliver house, were also told to come back to-morrow. They were accompanied by their parents, who assured their presence.

In the case of Henry Wolf, charged with offering unwholesome meat for sale, a demurrer to the affidavit was argued and sustained.

A motion for re-hearing of the case of Wm. J. Mabalk, the lad sent to the reform school for assault and battery, was set for hearing in the afternoon.

A beastly charge against Wm. Freise and Stephen Millard was still under hearing when the court took recess. Officer Hinde testified that the prisoners were "full," but not to say "drunk."

ATTENTION, DEMOCRATS.

The primaries to nominate councilmen to fill the vacancies in the First and Fourth wards MUST be held this evening. The board of elections has so decided. The Fourth ward democratic committeeman, Mr. Steinman, has made arrangements for the primary in the Fourth. The democrats of the First should meet this evening and report their nominee to the election board not later than 9 o'clock to-night.

Fostoria has now another daily paper, the Review. Nothing like being metropolitan.

The republican secretary of state squeezes through with 973 in Ohio. Pretty near a come-down from 25,000.

Dorr street's name will not be changed. The ordinance allowing of it was laid on the table in the council last night. Good enough.

Since the election and jollifying have been properly attended to, let us all put our best foot forward for Toledo and the beloved Buckeye state.

A Reader of the Bee writes for information as to the late election. As soon as the returns are canvassed, and reliable figures announced, the same will be given.

Ohio elects one democratic elector, Jas. P. Seward leading the ticket. Mr. Cleveland will therefore get a vote from the Buckeye state. Sorry he does not get the 23.

John Farley's name is mentioned by a correspondent in another column for governor. John is somewhat of a calculator, and would probably give the republicans as lively a tilt as any of the candidates could.

While making an effort to secure the republican state convention, why should not Toledo's forces unite and secure the democratic convention also? Both can be brought here if the proper effort is made.

There seems to be general agreement that Chairman Harrity will go into Cleveland's cabinet. He was Philadelphia's postmaster when Mr. Cleveland was president, and if he takes a portfolio, will likely succeed Mr. Wanamaker.

The health boards of Ohio will take time by the forelock in adopting precautions to prevent the introduction and spread of cholera in this state. A meeting of these boards will be held in Columbus, January 25 next. All the states should act in unison, for there is even more apprehension regarding the spread of the epidemic next year than was felt last summer.

Nothing short of a probe to the bottom will be satisfactory in the controversy between Superintendent Compton and Member Scott. The good of the schools demands that fairness shall prevail. Especially is this due to the young ladies who study for years to acquire an education, and who then ought not to be relegated to the rear to gratify a whim on the part of some member.

Republican journals continue to volunteer their advice to President-elect Cleveland and the democratic party, as to the course that shall be, or ought to be pursued. It is indeed very kind of them, and their advice will probably receive due consideration. But they seem to be oblivious to the fact, that the democratic party has ever been closely allied to the interests of the people, and that at the close of the Cleveland administration four years ago there was a surplus and not a deficit in Uncle Sam's big cash box.

The wrath of republican senators in the case of Vice-President-elect Stevenson inured to that gentleman's benefit. The Mansfield Shield calls attention to the fact that in 1888 President Cleveland sent in the appointment of Adlai Stevenson to the vacancy in the supreme court of the District of Columbia. The republican senate refused to confirm, and time at last brings a rebuke that has a spice of satisfaction in it. Mr. Stevenson will after the 4th of March next preside over the body that rejected his confirmation four years ago. "The mills of the gods grind slow, but they grind exceeding fine."

The lady students of the State university at Columbus have packed their satchel, bundled up their books and gone home. It is all owing to an objection to their quarters. They claim they are not fit for occupancy. They have not been frightened away by any wandering mouse, nor on account of any uncanny spectre supposed to be wandering about their apartments. But, would you believe it? They object to having such a little thing as a medical dissecting room below them. While others might feel a special delight in the location of such quarters, they seem to have decided objections, and have acted accordingly.

There is much diversity of opinion among astronomers as there is among modern-day politicians. One astronomer claims that the Holmes comet, now an object of interest at our obervatories, is identical with that of Biela. Another claims that it is a new celestial tramp. One says it is approaching the earth and that before many days it will give us a slight switching with its tail. Another denies this and maintains that it is receding and darting off into space with inconceivable velocity. We, who are not astronomers, can only await a few days with patience, before deciding which of our learned sky-gazers have made a miscalculation.

Last Sunday Rev. DeWitt Talmage fulfilled his promise in presenting his defense of Russia against the many calumnies heaped upon that imperial power. In the course of his report on that empire he announced that Russia was the true friend of the United States of all the European powers—that but for the presence of two Russian fleets in American waters during the war of the rebellion—the one at New York and the other at San Francisco—our great civil conflict might have had a different termination, as "two of the mightiest nations of Europe would have mingled in our fight. Further, the Brooklyn divine made the startling statement, "I declare before God and the nation that I believe Russia saved the United States of America."

An exchange gives the following as Bill Nye's definition of a newspaper:

It is a library. It is an encyclopedia, a poem, a history, a dictionary, a time table, a romance, a guide to political resume, a ground plan to the civilized world, a low-priced multum in parvo, an obituary, a ship-wreck of symphony in solid brevier, a medley of life and death, a grand aggregation of man's glory and of all his shame. It is, in short, a bird's eye view of all the magnanimity and meanness, the joys and sorrows, births and deaths, the pride and poverty of the world, all for a few cents.

Bill Nye never perpetrated anything of the kind, or any approach to it. The author of the above, long since passed away, was one of America's most scholarly students—one who contributed many gems to our literary vocabulary—Bayard F. Taylor.

The recent developments that have come to the surface, culminating in the indictment of seven councilmen, have aroused a greater interest among our citizens regarding our municipal government, without regard to party affiliations. A number of plans have been proposed whereby better security can be attained in such government of the city as shall inure to the greater good and security of all. These various plans have been discussed through the press of the city, some of which have been presented with definite minuteness. What the people want is the adoption of some method that will secure greater responsibility from the servants of the people, and at the same time give us a wise and equitable administration in the enforcement of all necessary provisions. To this end those of our citizens who have at heart the welfare of Toledo and its good government would do well to accept the invitation extended this evening for consultation. In a multitude of counsellors some good may be evolved, that may free us from the present looseness and irresponsibility of municipal powers.

Opposition developed at the council meeting last night to changing the name of Dorr street to Fairview avenue shows a healthy sentiment in favor of a preservation of the old landmarks. The iconoclast is ever very fresh, and without consideration of the eternal fitness of things. The criticism that another ordinance to change the name of a street had passed without a whisper was as just as it was severe. "Bridge" was just as good a name as "Front," but some genius eager for change thought "Front" would be more advanced. That's about all there is to such changes. There has been too much of this sort of thing, and too great complaisance in the council in making unnecessary changes just because they are petitioned for. Some streets bear two or more names within their length. How many people know to-day where City Park avenue is? It is merely a name given to a portion of Lenk street, by which good old name the whole street continues to be known. It was time that a stop be put to this foolishness, and if public respect for the name of Dorr has done that, it is proof that there's something in a name. The next step might be to undo some of the mischief already done in the unnecessary multiplying of street names.

The New York Tribune virtually says to the republican press of the entire country: Gentlemen, you do not understand the cause of the triumph of the democratic party—none of you having yet given the true reason why we were defeated at the polls—you are all off. And with the wisdom of Sir Oracle, it attributes republican defeat to the growth of socialism in this country, and that this growth had its origin in the Black Friday of 1873. The Tribune, in one sense, is as wide of the mark as some of its distinguished contemporaries. If it means, in its tenor of socialism, that which is so nearly allied to the spirit of anarchy, the utterance of the Tribune may only be attributed to the chagrin of defeat. If, however, it means nothing more than the spirit of unrest that pervades all classes of a diversified population—a spirit brought about by the centralization of wealth—the combination of great interests—the formation of powerful trusts—encouraged by the growing tendency to class legislation that has characterized the republican party—if the Tribune means this, when it speaks of socialism, this great republican mouthpiece is correct in its conclusion. The people have aroused to a realization of their exact condition—they have observed with true foresight the tendency manifested in both state and national legislation—a tendency rather in favor of great corporations than of the individual interests of the masses. Hence the change. It is nothing more than the repetition of history. When a great party proves false to the confidence of the American people, it is certain to receive an overwhelming condemnation.

HON. MILTON SAYLER.

Hon. Milton Sayler, whose recent death in New York has been announced, was one of Ohio's esteemed citizens and an estimable gentleman. The writer of this knew him in boyhood. He came from the farm and was eminently a self-made man. A Preble county boy, with limited means, he sought every opportunity to improve his mind, worked his way into Miami university, where he qualified himself as a teacher, and subsequently took up the legal profession and entered the arena of politics. He served six years in congress, and was elected one term as speaker pro tem. of the house. He was an ardent democrat, a wise counselor, a man of keen mental powers and of sterling integrity. Major Bickham, of the Dayton Journal, rabid republican as he is, pays Mr. Sayler this high encomium:

We knew Milton Sayler well, and, although our political lines after the war were as wide apart as the poles, an agreeable friendship existed and was maintained during the most intense political controversies of this period of active party life. He was one of the most lovable men we ever knew, as handsome as Apollo, a Chesterfield in manners, without its severe formalities, abundant in classical learning, accomplished in literature and as chivalrous in his devotion to friends as if sworn to fidelity to them. All who knew him most thoroughly esteemed him.

WHO WAS

The Author of the Lady of Lyons?

To the Editor:—Would you be kind enough, through the columns of your estimable paper, to answer a question for a company of ladies who are studying literature?

Was Robert Lord Lytton (Owen Meredith) the same Edward Lord Lytton who wrote the Lady of Lyons, or were they father and son? Any information concerning the same will be esteemed a favor.

Hamler, Nov. 19. Mrs. J.

The Lady of Lyons was written by Edward George, Earl Lytton, who was the father of Edward Robert, Baron Lytton. The latter was the author of Owen Meredith.

SPECIALLY IMPORTANT

Session of the Woman's Building Company

Through some misunderstanding the report has been published that the Woman's Building company intended to let the club house project drop.

This is not true.

The ladies are as much in earnest as ever, but they are thinking of renting a club house to see how the scheme will work, and how the clubs will come to the front.

This matter will be discussed at the meeting of the committe, to be held Saturday afternoon in the Woman's Recorder office in the Worthington block, and all women interested in the least, are requested to be present.

VALUABLE OLD VIOLINS

In the Possession of Otto Sand, of Toledo.

He Sells a Tecchler for Seventeen Hundred Dollars.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning the Collection and Something About the Manner in Which Imitations Are Produced.

Over three hundred years ago David Tecchler, a German by birth, went to Italy and took to making violins. He had made violins at Salesburg before going to Rome, probably to order for his patrons, but they were very inferior compared with his Italian productions. They were so different that connoisseurs found and still find it difficult to reconcile the two varieites so distinct, as the work of one man. One of Tecchler's Italian models wandered about the world, now in the possession of a master who treasured it as a gift from the gods, then into less appreciative hands, where its fine corners were blunted, its polish dimmed; then it would be found out by some artist, placed in its proper sphere once more only to outlive its master and fall again unappreciated into a dusty corner of a pawnshop. Finally this old violin, after traveling about the old world some hundreds of years became a total wreck. It was smashed into little pieces by careless hands. It looked as if its days of beauty and usefulness were over. But not so.

It happened that Otto Sand, of this city, when in Europe, ran across the possessor of the pieces and, for a comparatively small sum—although it was large enough—purchased the fragments that looked like anything but a violin. The pieces were taken in hand by a celebrated violin maker, and when they left his shop they were transformed into a perfect violin again.

It was a precarious undertaking: the slightest mistake would have ruined the whole thing, but such a mistake was luckily avoided and the instrument was good for another 300 years, possessing all its former beauty of tone and outline. It was carefully guarded all the years it was in Mr. Sands' possession, but now another epoch in its history begins as it leaves Toledo for New York, Mr. Sand having just sold it to a gentleman in that city for $1,700.

Mr. Sand is by no means poor in violins even after having parted with so valuable a specimen. He probably has as fine a collection as any one man in this country. He has a genuine Joseph Guarnerius, of the Cremona school, made in 1784, and valued at $2,000. It is almost a model of Paganni's famous instrument by the same maker, now in the municipal palace at Genoa. It is said that Guarnerius was confined in prison for a long period of years, and there by bribing the guard to bring him wood he fashioned instruments that are called "Prison Josephs."

The thoroughly ignorant nowadays are duped with a rude violin said to be a genuine "Prison Joseph," and are assured that the workmanship is as poor as it is by reason of Guarnerius' limited facilities for turning them out.

Mr. Sand handed a Bee a Cremona, saying, "You can read the name of the maker in old-fashioned letters on a slip pasted on the interior, but while the violin is genuine, the slip is an imitation.

"It seems strange, does it not?"

"Where, then, is the real slip, do you say?"

"Oh, that is quietly reposing in the bottom of some imitation instrument carrying with it an air of genuineness. It is seldom you will find a genuine slip in a genuine violin. The instrument tells its own story and the slip is very valuable to fool the uninitiated with."

Mr. Sand also has a handsome instrument made by Antonius Hieronymus Amatifecit in 1634.

Another one in his possession is a German model made by Hopff along in the seventeen hundreds.

One that he prizes highly is an Alexander Gagleano, made in Naples early in 1700.

A grand instrument in his collection is one of Francisco Ruggeri's, bearing the date 1702. A noticeable thing about this violin is the purling, as the narrow strip of inlaid work running round the edge is called. It is anything but true and a casual observer would say it was the production of a careless workman. And so in a sense it was, for Ruggeri did not seek beauty, but rather tone. This inlaying about the edge has two functions. It is the point where the vibrations cease and also prevents the back or belly from splitting inwards due to any blow the instrument may receive on the edge.

Another instrument in the collection is one made by N. Deehl in Darmstadt, in the seventeenth century.

It is seldom one sees so many fine violins together. The world is flooded with their imitations. In Bavaria and France there are wholesale copyists engaged in turning out modern antiques. Wood is baked in the ovens till it assumes the required brownness, steeped in strong acids, edges are rounded by a little judicious rubbing, giving the effect of years of wear, and endless other artifices are resorted to. But after all these imitations are so bare-faced as to be comparatively harmless. They only fool the fools.

Mr. Sand seldom says much about his valuable collection that is worth thousands of dollars, and it was only after considerable urging that he would talk about them.

WHIPPING IN THE SCHOOLS.

My Dear Rachel Ray: Your communication in the Bee of November 19 was read with much interest, and I thought a few words in reply might equally interest others who are very much interested in the Bee. I have taken the Been since it first showed its face, not always agreeing with it, but generally finding it on the right side. In a question like this of government in the public schools it is impossible for a paper with the position of the Bee to take sides in such a case. It therefore (occasionally) allows people to write their "airy nothings" on different sides of the same question. To my mind, your communication leaves out one very important code, which is at the foundation of all the laws of the world, the Bible. The book which all counsellors have to ultimately come to, to base their conclusions on. I believe in the Bible, one reason that I believe in it is the entire impartiality with which the records were made. We read of some very cruel things in the Bible (from our standpoint). The pure, innocent God Man, Jesus Christ, took many of his sayings from the Bible, notably when he drove the merchants out of the temple with a whip. One of his strongest sayings to his people was to live up to their law. It appears from your writing, and others that have written in the same vein, from time to time, that abandonment of all law and discipline is the object aimed at in the public schools. While the writer would be glad to see the millenium in 1892, he does not expect it, until some few years after the opening of the next century at least. Law is here because the Eternal God of Justice placed it here. Law would punish Rachel Ray's little child (if she has one) if it was not kept from overturning the kettle of hot water that was set so cosily on the hearth. Law interposes itself in every movement that a person makes; it is one reason that I believe there is a God who controls this universe. And I believe that the great loving God of the universe dislikes to see people suffer much more than the people do themselves.

This communication is altogether too long now, or I could give incidents of my life as a boy, which the vigorous enforcement of the discipline, at that time in vogue in the schools, was no doubt an influence which kept me from courses that would have led to crime. At the present time there is a boy who has been tried in every way possible, by the first teacher that I have any knowledge of, in all manner of kindness such as giving him an apple or orange occasionally, procured clothes, and did everything she could to make him better physically and morally. He has passed out of her control some time since. The teachers which he has had since have tried the same things with him. These teachers are among the best in the city, and have tried every known means of kindness to subdue him, but have only been able to do it with a rod or through fear. Miss Ray cannot say that this has not been tried; she betrays an entire ignorance of the facts at issue by nearly every sentence she writes, and I say here and cannot be truthfully disputed, the public schools of Toledo, or any other public institution that draws its inmates from such a variety of nationalities as there are in any ordinary city, cannot be kept in order but by "Corporal Punishment." If the city was able to do it a central building or a building located for that purpose, could be built, where all incorrigibles from different schools could be sent for punishment of different lengths of time. If there was a central school of that kind in this city to which pupils going would know to a certainty that they would be punished, a new day would dawn for teachers. At the time the Western house of refuge was opened in New York state, tenancy from the schools was very prevalent. Through the connivance of the city officials and the officers of the house of refuge a few were caught and kept there a few days, and no teacher went home for the rest of that summer with disordered nerves on account of disorderly pupils. SIVARD.

Suggestions for Charming Costumes

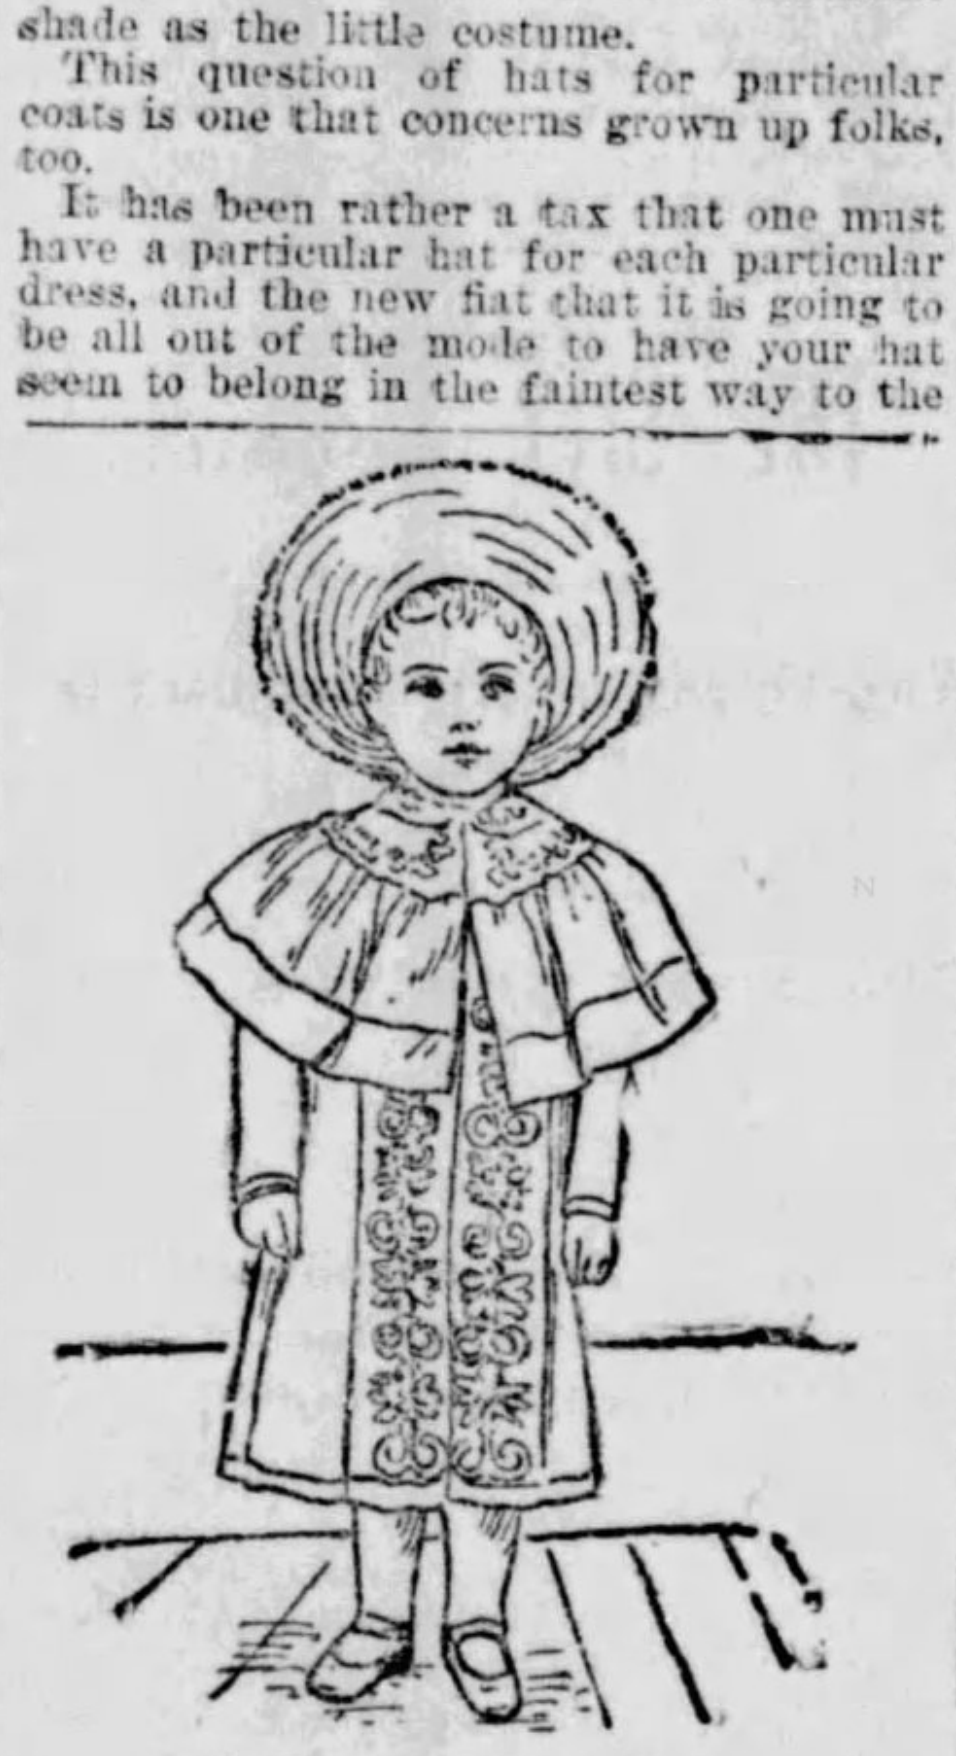
For the Little Ones—Will That Appalling Net Again Become the Rage.

(Special Correspondence Bee).
New York, November 22.

The charming little coat for a wee boy, as I have sketched it, would look equally well in very dark red or dark blue, or a pretty fawn, only in the latter case the question of tidiness comes in. Any light color soils so quickly. The large felt hat is very taking. It should be of the same shade as the little costume.

This question of hats for particular coats is one that concerns grown up folks, too.

It has been rather a tax that one must have a particular hat for each particular dress, and the new fiat that it is going to be all out of the mode to have your hat seem to belong in the faintest way to the gown with which you wear it, is going to give some of us a comfortable latitude. But hats that harmonize will never be out of taste, though they may be out of silly fashion. Harmony is always going to have good taste on its side, and don't let fashion run away with your good manners. Maybe you don't see where good manners come in? Well, it isn't good manners to make other people uncomfortable, and if you are going to do and wear all that fashion permits just now you are going about spraining your own dignity and other folks' eyesight.



A Coat for Your Boy.

Will it come? Shall we have the hair net with us once again? It has, so to say, been hanging over our heads for a long time past, and already a few daring spirits lead the van of fashion by enclosing their locks in the silken meshes which by some strange freak were once considered becoming. Men have laughed at us for frizzing our heads into the semblance of furze bushes; they have grumbled at the altitude to which we have aspired in dressing it; but surely their artistic souls are not so dead, their eye for the beautiful so dim, that they will ever encourage their fashion-ridden womankind to bring their hair down into the napes of their necks in the appallingly ugly net, and so give their heads the appearance of a sofa-cushion or traveling pillow.

TOM MANTON DEAD.

Prominent Pioneer and Citizen Passes Away.

Died at His Home, Corner Erie and Beach Streets, Last Night.

Mr. Thomas Manton, a well-known citizen of the Second ward, died at his home on the corner of Beach and Erie streets, at 11:30 last night.

He has been ailing for years, and it was only within a day or two that he took to his bed, and the announcement of his death comes as a severe shock to his many friends.

Few men in Toledo have been so widely known in Toledo business and political circles for over twenty-five years than Tom Manton.

He was at one time assistant chief of the fire department, and afterwards went into the street contracting business and made money at it. He was in the grocery and saloon business for years in the Eighth and Second wards, and retired from active business only a few years ago.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

For Governor: John H. Farley.

To the Editor:—There is plenty of tall timber among Ohio democrats for governor, but none better than my candidate, John H. Farley, of Cleveland.

He is very level headed and his heart is nearly as big as his big body.

He has long been known as one of the most sagacious politicians in the state. His management of the recent campaign proves that he has few, if any, equals in the state in that respect.

His democracy is of the stalwart, rock-ribbed kind; his administrative ability is of the highest order; his perfect honesty is conceded by everybody.

He will be a sure winner! J.

The Open Street Car.

To the Editor: "One at a time the open summer cars will be taken from the Consolidated lines." The above appeared as a news item in last evening's Blade. How very sad, indeed! The dreary winter has come, the snow flakes float about in the cold, crisp air, the sharp whistling winds make us button our coats and wraps about us, and we are obliged to rub our ears to relieve them of the piercing cold; there is nothing left to remind us of the warm, genial summer that is past, only the fireless and open cars of the Consolidated line; and now these, too, are to be taken away. The manager of the line does not wish to inflict too great a shock upon our feelings all at once. He will break the news gently to us, as it were; remove one car at a time. How very thoughtful and kind of Mr. Lang.

Might I offer one suggestion for his information? I notice the conductors and motor men on his cars are wearing heavy winter overcoats, caps and gloves. This should not be allowed. He ought to at once order them to lay aside their warm winter clothing and wear instead linen coats and straw hats, etc. Otherwise people who are obliged to patronize his line may think there should be fires in the cars this cold weather. Indeed, they are thinking so now, and no small part of the conductor's duties these days is to apologize to dissatisfied passengers because of the cold, comfortless cars.

Now, one word to the people. My physician has told me that it is very dangerous to leave a nice warm room or office and sit in a fireless car even for a few minutes. Better a thousand times walk and save your health and your money, too. Ask your doctor.

THE PRESS FRATERNITY.

Prosperity and Hospitality of the Chicago Press Club.

"Equipped With All the Comforts of a Home"—Journalistic Gossip.

A correspondent of the Buffalo News indulges in the following gossipy bit of news from the world's fair city:

Commend me to the Chicago Press club for whole-souled hospitality, unaltered by prosperity, though in a year from now they will be able to hold their nose—collectively—at an ascension of 45 degress, and dispense home comforts to other clubs at a financial advantage to their own. George Snyder, one of the officers of the Illinois bank on Dearborn street, is also treasurer of the club, and it was mainly due to his interest that they have floated bonds in the sum total of $60,000. July next they begin building a magnificent home on aristocratic Michigan avenue; the lot is next to the now famous Athletic club, and the lease for 100 years at a moderate ground rental, has been obtained from the McCormick estate. But this is not all. The interest of Chicago people in home affairs is proverbial, so the contract reads that this lease can be renewed for another hundred years without revaluation!

Associated with them in occupying different floors will be the Standard club, Chicago Literary club and Papyrus club. The top floor will be devoted to a restaurant and buffet, while the roof will be turned into a garden; a Palmyra garden in summer and a Russian garden in winter. Cooling sherbets, lithesome Nautch girls, dreamy music of Egyptian color and French origin when the moon is high and the pajamah at a premium; while Tsigan beauties from Krasnoje Sielo, swarthy Huns and plenty of uncolored Japan with genuine Arak will be the probable bill of fare when, as Shakespeare has it, "icicles hang on the wall."

To come back to the present quarters on Clark street, they are, to use an old homily, "equipped with all the comforts of home," not forgetting to mention a grand piano that helps out a good chorus immensely. It was Mr. Ed K. Pritchard, the financial secretary, who made me feel at home among some of the shining lights of Chicago's enterprising journalism. There was A. J. Parker of the Railway Bureau, Homer Carr of the Marine Bureau and Mr. Ballentine, recently managing editor of the News; Mr. Fay, the Chicago correspondent of the New York World, and Mr. M. E. Dickson of the Chicago Tribune. There was good cheer and good stories, reminiscences from active service, but I had to leave. Alas! that time waits for no one! On leaving this hospitable abode I shook hands with Mr. Henderson, the railway editor of the Associated Press; with Mr. Fuller, formerly of the Herald, and with Stanley Waterloo. By the way, Mr. Fuller is the originator of the famous "Stories of the Street" that have become so popular in Chicago's journalism, while Mr. Waterloo, now on the editorial staff of the Journal, bears the proud title of "Pioneer of Evening Journalism," having founded the St. Louis Chronicle, St. Paul Day, now the Dispatch, the Chicago Mail, Critic and Capital at Washington; he is also author of the late successful novel, "Man and Woman," so favorably commented upon by the best reviewers. By the way, the picture of the woman in this work is that of a dear little child, as I remember her, with long curls, a stick of candy in the mouth and a big doll under the arm; it was in St. Louis 18 years ago. I was booked for a concert and was stopping with the parents of this now grown up and married woman, whose new home shines with reflection from her bright face and intellectual attainments.

DR. SCOTT ANSWERS

The Charges Preferred by Superintendent Compton,

Making Sweeping Denial, Including References.

The Defense Submitted in Writing and Appears Below—Other Business of the Board of Education.

The school board did not stir things up as lively at the meeting last evening as was generally expected.

Mr. Eversman moved that the vote taken at the last meeting, to give the basement of the Sherman street school for kindergarten purposes, be reconsidered, as the room was needed for public school purposes. The matter was referred to the superintendent with power to act.

Superintendent of Buildings Conrad reported that he had settled the janitor difficulty by installing Mr. Peugh at the Lagrange street school and the janitor of that building at the Monroe street school.

The several committees reported the regular monthly bills due, which were ordered paid.

Truant Officer Disher filed his report for the month.

Mr. Hubbard stated that there was a vacancy in the library board of trustees, caused by the resignation of W. H. Scott, and that the members of the board suggested the name of H. C. Adams, which was recommended by the board to the council for appointment.

Mr. Kohn stated that Superintendent Compton had appointed Mrs. Sarah Foley as teacher in the Erie school, to take charge of an extra room. He submitted a letter of declination from the lady, which was accepted.

The finance committee reported the teachers' salary, $13,660.66, and janitors', $608.08, for the month of November.

About 8:30, Mr. Zirwas, chairman of the committee appointed to investigate the charges against Dr. Scott, the member from the Sixth ward, arose and stated that the committee had met, discussed the charges, and in conclusion resolved to summon Dr. Scott before the board, to hear the charges and report of the committee, and answer to them if he so desired. Dr. Scott was present.

The report of the committee was accepted.

Mr. Schlingman moved that Dr. Scott be heard. The doctor stated that he had prepared a written statement in answer to Mr. Compton's charges which he read:

Toledo, O., Nov. 21, 1892.

Gentlemen of the Board of Education:

It is to be sincerely regretted that our superintendent of schools has fallen into such an abject state of desperation and disregard for truth in order to make an example of the member of this board from the Sixth ward.

I do not deem it necessary to enter into an extended denial of the charges made in writing against me by Mr. Compton; a careful reading of them will reveal to your minds his design. He has well studied it.

It would be impossible for him to any more successfully misrepresent the alleged interviews and occurrences between himself and me and at the same time give them a coloring or even a semblance of truth.

I have had some conversation with Mr. Compton regarding the employment of Catholics as teachers as I have had with members of this board.

Gentlemen, you are aware that we have in the city of Toledo, and in various other cities of our country a vast number of persons made up of the various branches of the Protestant church, besides many persons who are not identified with any religious body, who believe that those who refuse to allow their children to be educated in our public schools cannot justly claim positions for them therein when they are not, in education, the product of our public schools, and the laws governing them, requiring the strong arm of the law to enforce obedience, are not entitled, and are not qualified, to hold the responsible position of teacher or instructor. I do not hesitate to say that I stand upon the above platform on this question.

In a friendly, but not in an over zealous manner, I have endeavored to ascertain Mr. Compton's ideas upon this subject. He did not know who were Catholics, but referred me to Mr. Hutchinson, who, as he said, could go over the list of teachers in the schools and mark the names of all who were Catholics. This Mr. Hutchinson did in my presence.

My interviews with Mr. Compton on this question were always of the most pleasant nature, as they have been with members of this board, and continued to be so until the occurrences in the Gallette case, when, as you remember, gentlemen, the conduct of Mr. Compton caused me to characterize him in, perhaps, a little too strong terms.

It would seem, too, from Mr. Compton's attack upon me, that I am to bear the sins of this entire board. He very deliberately charges me with being responsible for two or three teachers of the Sixth ward not being recommended by our teachers' committee, and for the 'brutal transfer' to the extreme northwestern part of the city of Miss Sullivan when, as the records will show, I was not present at the board meeting when the transfer of Miss Sullivan was made, and furthermore, the employment of Miss Sullivan was practically in the hands of the teachers' committee. This committee well knows and can testify that I never have gone before it asking for the transfer or removal of any teacher whatsoever.

Mr. Compton, not content with endeavoring to generate a prejudice against me among Catholics, turns to the Jews.

I saw Mr. Compton on the day Miss Sugarman was being examined, and spoke with him concerning some dissatisfaction with her in our schools as a teacher. I remarked to him that she was reputed to be a good scholar. He replied smilingly that "Sometimes the best of them fail." When Mr. Compton said that I demanded of him then or at any time thereafter to make her or any applicant for a certificate fail, he tells a deliberate falsehood. I was not so strenuously opposed to Miss Sugarman as Mr. Compton alleges. There are members of this board who know that I was in favor of giving her a fair trial. Mr. Compton said to one of the members of this board that I was in favor of giving her a fair trial as a teacher.

In the case of the "notoriously" inefficient teacher to which he refers, I, together with others of the board, wanted to give her another chance, it being remarked at the time by one of the members, that occasionally teachers who had made a failure on beginning, afterward on further trial had made excellent teachers.

Mr. Compton surely goes begging for material for his composition about me when he attacks me because I saw fit to take an interest in the school building of East Toledo. What great chumps he must take our building committee to be, and would have the public believe them to be, that they would allow a member of this board to entirely control its action, and that it would be led to enter into a scheme for the personal aggrandizement of a member and not for the benefit of the city. What a brilliant building committee, indeed, if Mr. Compton's story be true.

Mr. Compton evidently has written as he has about me in order to make an example of a member of this board. He has maliciously assailed my character, endeavored to traduce it and to place me in a false light. He has rushed into print with a bundle of falsehoods, thereby hoping to engender popular prejudice against me, and thereby injure me in whatsoever way he can. He has impugned my motives unjustly and without cause. He has maliciously attacked me in everything he has to say about me. The tone of his entire article bespeaks for him a malevolent disposition.

Gentlemen, you know and my neighbors of East Toledo know whether or not I am an enemy of our schools. As members of this board we have labored for the upbuilding of popular education in this city and have treated the opinions of each other when we have disagreed, with deference and respect. We have not been exacting of each other or ungentlemanly in our conduct.

Our dear superintendent seems to be afraid of me and invokes your protection. Poor creature.

He has courage enough to beat a boy into St. Vitus, but he will find that when he undertakes to besmirch and malign my character in order to gain favor with a certain element he will find that he has entered upon busines that will not be very profitable to him—that he cannot elevate himself by pulling some one else down.

I respectfully invite your attention to the manner in which Mr. Compton has rushed into publicity concerning the matter upon which we have disagreed.

Are these the means he expects to use in the future when members of this board are not in harmony with him? Does he expect to hold us in awe of his pen and to keep us silent? What is the design of such a proceedure?

I regret that it becomes necessary for me to reply to him, but since he has thus so maliciously assailed me before you and through the press, I have deemed it in justice to myself and family to formally answer the charges he has made against me, and to invite your attention to some of his designs and purposes as portrayed in his conduct towards me.

In conclusion, I wish to say in behalf of my friends of the Sixth ward and for myself, that this action of Mr. Compton does not scare me in the least. In the future I shall, as I have in the past, work for the best interests of our schools and vote on all questions according to my convictions.

DR. E. E. SCOTT.

Mr. Kohn stated that it would be well to proceed with the hearing of the case. Dr. Scott said that he had received notice to be on hand and answer to the charge preferred. He had done so, but had brought no witnesses.

Mr. Compton was prepared to present his side of the case.

Mr. Trost suggested that the board adjourn until next Monday night, when a special meeting would be held and at that time both sides could be heard and a decision be rendered at the next regular meeting. A motion to this effect prevailed.

Beautiful and Economical Christmas Presents.

"When you know the many ways I use Diamond Paints," writes Jean Hunt in the Ladies' Journal, "you will not wonder that I buy a dozen packages at a time. I have made 23 different and handsome Christmas presents with their aid.

"I use the gold, silver and copper on picture frames, decorated vases, and for giving the finishing touches to many different kinds of fancy work. They cost but 10 cents a package, can be obtained at any drug or art store, and are very easy to use."

THE CITY COUNCIL.

Two-Thirds of the Members Get Together.

The Board Able to Suspend the Rules.

Printing Contracts Confirmed—Work Done Under Direction of the City Engineer Accepted—Dorr Street and the Cars.

Besides the few councilmen and the many lobbyists usually present at the meetings of the city council there were present in the chamber last night three policemen other than sergeant-at-arms Hassenzahl. These were Officers Frish, Strasberger and Dodge, who had been ordered to be on hand ready to go after absent members who might be needed to make up the necessary two-thirds majority to suspend the rules for the succession readings and passage of ordinances on the same night. At 8:15 it was discovered that a quorum was present, and the meeting was called to order by President Coleman, beside whom there were in their seats 12 councilmen. This constituted all the board except Messrs. Doner, Gill and Rutherford, and made one less than the two-thirds. The extra officers were sent out to hunt up and bring in the absentees. It was understood that Mr. Rutherford was out of town, so that the search was for Messrs. Doner and Gill.

The minutes of the former meeting being approved, Mr. Manchester stated that he had no desire to take part in the proceedings unless it was absolutely necessary. The president stated that his presence was required, as the salary ordinance had to be passed.

Mr. Hake presented resolutions to grant privilege of neatly boxing the gas-lamp posst for advertising purposes, at $1 per posts for advertising purposes, at $1 per nue east of Broadway, and for a walk on Holland avenue; and all passed.

From the Judiciary Committee.

Resolutions were passed to abate taxes on lots 175 and 192 Daniels' addition in excess of 25 per cent. and taxes on lots 131 Brown's addition, 104 and part of 105 The report of receipts was received and Woodland addition and lots 15 and 16 Woodland addition for sewers, because they had been formerly assessed for drainage; also to approve schedule of bills.

From the Auditor.

The report o freceipts was received and resolutions were agreed to for accepting sewers 455, 435, 440 and 431; to appoint sewer inspectors for the same sewers; to permit the engineer to issue a permit to drain a lot in Brown's addition; to approve the bond of Wm. McMahon for the paving of Bancroft street, and to confirm assessment for sewer 424 on Sixteenth street. The assessment for sewer 422 had been referred to the committee.

Communications

Were read from the police and health boards requesting that the solicitor draft an ordinance to amend the regulations so as to fix fees for searches for registrations of both marriages and deaths, as recommended by the boards, and asking for legislation to drain or fill block 59, North Toledo. They were referred to the solicitor.

A communication was read from the mayor enclosing the resignations of Councilmen Neuendorf and Daly, stating their acceptance and the issue of a proclamation for an election on December 2.

Mr. Felker, on leave, presented a resolution to permit John Jackson to construct a sewer.

Business From Aldermen.

A motion to drop the ordinances and take up the resolutions from the aldermen prevailed and they were passed as follows:

To build walks on both sides of Lenk street, from Swan creek to North Railroad avenue; to issue permit to drain lots 67, 68, 69, 41, 42 and 43, Hall & Morris' addition into sewer 262; to pave State street, from Canton avenue to Union street; directing the street commissioner to notify the contractors for the National Union building and building at Jefferson and Water streets to build sidewalks; authorizing the cemetery trustees to purchase three acres of land from Dr. A. F. Bissell; to grade Rogers street, from Navarre avenue to Woodville street; directing the auditor to deliver coupons to the Warren-Scharf Asphalt Paving company; to appoint committees to assess sewers 430 and 437; approving the bond of Thos. McKinney, for paving Beacon street; accepting the turnpiking on Russell street, the grading of McDonald, Park and Beacon streets, and sewers Nos. 430 and 437, and confirming the contract with Andrew Fleischman for a sidewalk on East Broadway, in front of lot 338, Daniels' addition.

Attacking the Ordinances.

The president, asking what was to be done with the ordinances, the solicitor advised reading them a first time, and if other members came in the rules could be suspended; and if not, special meetings could be called to advance them to passage. On motion of Mr. Lee, the ordinances were called. That to appropriate money to pay claims for improvements was read. This was followed by the first reading of the ordinances to pave Washington street, from Collingwood to Lawrence avenue; and to grade Walbridge avenue, from Hawley to Hiett street, and Spring from Givens to Poplar street.

A motion of Mr. Morris to reconsider the vote to reject bids for paving Fulton street and to re-advertise, was declared lost; but on call of the roll all voted aye.

Mr. Gill came in, having been met by the searching police on his way from Wonderland to the council chamber. On motion of Mr. Manchester to suspend the rules on the ordinance to appropriate money for payment of claims for improvements, alll voted aye, and the ordinance was rushed to passage. The same thing was done with the other ordinances read a first time. Other ordinances were then taken up and passed under suspension of the rules, as follows:

To pave Twenty-second street, from Woodruff avenue to Monroe street; to grade Second street, from Oak street to Cornwall addition; to pave Missouri street, from Washington to Division, and from Division to a point 90 feet east of Collingwood avenue; and to repave the alley between Summit and St. Clair streets, from Adams to Madison and from Monroe to Perry streets.

Mr. Miller, on leave, introduced an ordinance to change the name of Bridge street, from the river to Starr avenue, to Main street, and it was read three times and passed.

Ordinances were passed for the improvement of Washington street from Cole to Lawrence avenue, and Wisconsin street from Washington to Lenk; to amend the house licensing ordinance; to repeal an ordinance to improve State street from Canton avenue to Union street, and to establish the grade of Warren street from Bancroft street to Delaware avenue.

Mr. Lee, on leave, presented a resolution instructing the clerk to advertise for bids for the city printing, and it carried.

On reading of the ordinance to amend the salary ordinance, Mr. Lee moved reference back to the committee. Chief Wall explained the position and the ordinance passed.

Dorr Street Double Track.

The ordinance to grant the Toledo Consolidated street railway the right to construct a double track on Dorr street was opposed by Mr. Morris, who moved to amend by striking out the term of 25 years from date and substituting expiring of the franchise at the time of the old charter.

Mr. Lang, superintendent of the company, was heard, and argued that the people on the street had petitioned for the double track to save paving; that the company could not afford to spend $50,000 to build the line without the extension of the franchise; that the street needed the double track, and that other franchises ran out at different times.

The motion to amend was lost by vote of ten yeas to four nays.

Mr. Taylor moved reconsideration, which was lost by a vote of twelve yeas to two nays, Messrs. Coleman and Lee. A discussion ensued on the question of three-cent fares on the street and lines connecting with it, and Mr. Lang declared that the company would not accept the ordinance with that proviso. A motion by Mr. Lee to the effect stated was lost, whereupon he moved that the company after two years give the city one per cent. of the gross earnings over this line; but withdrew it as probably impracticable. The question of transfers was also discussed, and after considerable talk a motion to suspend the rules to advance the ordinance was lost, Messrs. Coleman and Lee again voting nay.

An Array of Ordinances.

Ordinances from the aldermen were then passed, under suspension of the rules, to assess special taxes to improve the alley between St. Clair and Oliver streets, St. Louis, Albany, Park, Russell, McDonald, Union, Lenk, Ash, Miami and Superior streets and Maumee avenue; to appropriate money to pay general claims and to pay salaries.

The unfinished business consisted of a lot of ordinances, and all but one were passed—to improve Curtis, George and two different parts of Union streets; to construct a sewer on Balfe street; to accept plats of Osgood Place and Poe & Thomson's Curtis street addition; to appropriate money to pay certain claims; to assess special taxes on Washington, Vance, John, Jermania and Woodville streets, and two different parts of Air Line avenue; and to grant the Toledo Electric Street Railway company to change from a single to a double track on Ontario street from Stickney avenue to Galena street.

Dorr Street Remains.

The ordinance knocked out was that to change the name of Dorr street to Fairview avenue. Mr. Gill moved to lay it on the table. The street was named after a man who had been mayor of the city for many years.

Mr. Morris seconded the motion to table and stated his belief that the people who petitioned for the change did not consider what it implied. Mr. Dorr was prominently connected with the city, and the street was named out of compliment to him. A great many of his descendants lived here, and, without some good reason being given, it was too much to ask to change the name of an old established street that was part of the history of Toledo, for a simple whim. The people could better afford to build a monument to Charles Dorr, who had been a good man for Toledo

Mr. Walker argued that as the people along the street wanted the change it should be made. He didn't know what members had against the Eighth ward. They had opposed the double tracking of the street and also the change of name, though the name of another street had been changed without a whimper.

Mr. Morris repudiated the idea of opposition to any section of the city. He favored the double tracking, but opposed extending the franchise. The people generally were interested in the proposed change of name of an important street.

Capt. P. H. Dowling was heard and first referred to the ease with which signatures to petitions were gotten. Henry S. Babbit, of the Massachusetts legislature, found his own name third on a petition to change his name to Rabbit. He believed a much larger petition on Dorr street could be obtained against this proposed change of name. He had heard objections from such men as Barton Smith and Mr. Detwiler. The name of the street was part of the history of Toledo. It had been Dorr street for 40 years, and it was ridiculous for men born since it was named to propose this change. Mr. Dorr was mayor of Toledo for 14 consecutive years; his widow still resided here, and the proposed change was an insult to her and his children. This was a matter in which the whole city was interested. Those who talked for the change probably did not know all these things. If they considered them they would say this change should not be—to cast a reflection on the memory of an honored citizen. The present name was a good one; but that proposed meant nothing. The name of the street did not make the character, but the citizens did. They could not be made better or their property more valuable by such change. It was simply humbug, and sickly sentimentality. As well change the names of George W. Davis or Abner L. Backus. They would continue to be known by their old names; as this street would. People would never inquire for Fairview avenue. That was the most senseless name that could have been selected.

The motion to table the ordinance was carried, only Messrs. Hake, Miller, Taylor and Walker voting nay, and Mr. Miller said it was because he signed the petition.

Resolutions confirming contracts with the Bee and Commercial for doing the city printing were confirmed.

"My dear," said a repentant husband to his wife, "if I have ever used any unkind words to you, I take them all back."

"No, you won't. I know you. You want to use them over again."—Tid-bits.

The false reflection on VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA is thus effectually repelled, and the very authority cited to injure it, is thereby prompted to give it a very handsome testimonial. B

A VISIT TO RUSSIA.

Dr. Talmage Corrects Wrong Impressions.

No Country So Misunderstood and No Monarch More Generally Misrepresented.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Rev. Dr. Talmage Sunday fulfilled his promise that he would again speak of his visit to Russia, and correct many wrong impressions concerning that empire and its ruler. After an exposition of Scripture and congregational singing, he took for his text, II. Peter ii. 10: "Presumptuous are they, self-willed, they are not afraid to speak evil of dignities."

Amid a most reprehensible crew, Peter here paints by one stroke the portrait of those who delight to slash at people in authority. Now, we all have a right to criticise evil behavior, whether in high places or low, but the fact that one is high up is no proof that he ought to be brought down. It is a bad streak of human nature now, as it was in the time of the text, a bad stroke of human nature that success of any kind excites the jealous antipathy of those who cannot climb the same steep. There never was a David on the throne that there was not some Absalom who wanted to get it. There never was a Christ but the world had saw and hammer ready to fashion a cross on which to assassinate him. Out of this evil spirit grow not only individual but national and international defamation. To no country has more injustice been done than to our own in days that are past. Long before Martin Chuzzlewit was printed, the literature of the world scoffed at everything American. Victor Hugo, as honest as he was unequaled in literary power, was so misinformed concerning America that he wrote: "The most singular thing is the need of whittling, with which all Americans are possessed. It is such that on Sunday they give the sailors little bits of wood because if they did not they would whittle the ship. In court, at the most critical moment, the judge, whittling, says: 'Prisoner, are you guilty?' and the accused tranquilly responds, whittling: 'I am not guilty.'" Lord John Russell called us "A bubble-bursting nationality." But our country has at last recovered from such caricature, and there is not a street on any city of Europe or Asia where the word "America" will not win deference. But, there is a sister nation on the other side of the sea now going through the process of international defamation. There is no country on earth so misunderstood as Russia, and no monarch more misrepresented than its emperor. Will it not be in the cause of justice if I try to set right the minds of those who compose this august assemblage and the minds of those to whom, on both sides of the ocean, these words shall come? If the slander of one person is wicked, then the slander of one hundred and twenty million people is one hundred and twenty million times more wicked.

In the name of righteousness and in behalf of civilization, and for the encouragement of all those good people who have been disheartened by the scandalization of Russia, I now speak. But Russia is so vast a subject that to treat it in one discourse is like attempting to run Niagara Falls over one mill wheel. Do not think that the very marked courtesies extended me last summer by the emperor and empress and crown prince of Russia have complimented me into the advocacy of that empire, for I shall present you authenticated facts that will reverse your opinions, if they have been antagonistic, as mine were reversed. I went last summer to Russia with as many baleful prejudices as would make an avalanche from the mountain of fabrication which has for years been heaped up against that empire. You ask how it is possible that such appalling misrepresentations of Russia could stand? I account for it by the fact the Russian language is the most impassable wall. Malign the United States or malign Great Britain or Germany or France, and by the next cablegram the falsehood is exposed, for we all understand English, and many of our people are familiar with German and French. But the Russian language, beautiful and easy to those born to speak it, is to most vocal organs an unpronounceable tongue, and if at St. Petersburg or Moscow any anti-Russian calumny were denied, the most of the world outside of Russia would never see or hear the denial.

What are the motives for misrepresentation? Commercial interests and international jealousy. Russia is as large as all the rest of Europe put together. Remember that a nation is only a man or a woman on a big scale. Go into any neighborhood of America and ask the physician who has a small practice what he thinks of the physician who has a large practice. Ask a lawyer who has no briefs what he thinks of the lawyer who has three rooms filled with clerks trying in vain to transact the superabundant business that comes to him. Ask the minister who has a very limited audience what he thinks of the minister who has overflowing audiences. Why does not Europe like Russia? Because she has enough acreage to swallow all Europe and feel she has only half a meal. Russia is as long as North and South American put together. "But," says some one, "do you mean to charge the authors and the lecturers who have written or spoken against Russia with falsehood?" By no means. You can find in any city or nation evils innumerable if you wish to discourse about them.

I said at St. Petersburg, to the most eminent lady of Russia, outside the imperial family: "Are those stories of cruelty and outrage that I have heard and read about true?" She replied: "No doubt, some of them are true: but do you not in America ever have officers of the law cruel and outrageous in their treatment of offenders? Do you not have instances where the police have clubbed innocent persons? Have you no instances where people in brief authority act arrogantly?" I replied: "Yes, we do." Then she said: "Why does the world hold our government responsible for exceptional outrages? As soon as an official is found to be cruel he immediately loses his place." Then I bethought myself. Do the people of America hold the government of Washington responsible for the Homestead riots at Pittsburg, or for railroad insurrections, or for the torch of the villain that consumes a block of houses, or for the ruffians who arrest a rail train, making the passengers hold up their arms until the pockets are picked? Why, then, hold the emperor of Russia, who is as impressive and genial a man as I have ever looked at or talked with, responsible for the wrongs enacted in a nation with a population twice as large in numbers as the millions of America? Suppose one monarch in Europe ruled over England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Germany, Spain, Italy, Austria, Norway and Sweden. Would it be fair to hold the monarch responsible for all that occurred in that mighty dominion? Now, you must remember that Alexander the Third reigns over wider dominion than all those empires put together. As a nation is only a man or woman on a big scale, let me ask, would you individually prefer to be judged by your faults or your virtues? All people, except ourselves, have faults.

The pessimist, attempting to write your biography, would take you in your weaker moods, and the picture of you on the first page of your biography would be as you looked after your own meanness had been practiced on you and you were tearing mad. Now, as I am an optimist, I give you fair warning that if I ever write your biography, I will take you as you looked the day your dividends came in 20 per cent. larger than you ever anticipated, or the morning on your way to business after your first child was born, or the morning after your conversion, when heaven had rolled in on your soul. The most accursed homunculi of all the earth are the pessimists, who, whether they judge individual or national character, and whether they wield tongue or pen, are filled with anathematization, and who have more to say about the freckles on the cheek of beauty than of the sunrises and sunsets that flush it.

It is most important that this country have right ideas concerning Russia, for, among all the nations this side of heaven, Russia is America's best friend. There has not been an hour in the last seventy-five years that the shipwreck of free institutions in America would not have called forth from all the despotisms of Europe and Asia a shout of gladness wide as earth and deep as perdition. But whoever else failed us, Russia never did, and whoever else was doubtful, Russia never was. Russia, then an old government, smiled on the cradle of our government while yet in its earliest infancy. Empress Catherine of Russia in 1776 or thereabouts offered kindly interference that our thirteen colonies might not go down under the cruelties of war. Again, in 1813, Russia stretched forth toward us a merciful hand. When our dreadful civil war was raging and the two thunder clouds of northern and southern valor clashed, Russia practically said to the nations of Europe: "Keep your hands off and let the brave men of the north and the south settle their own troubles." I rehearsed some of those scenes to the emperor last July, saying: "You were probably too young to remember the position that your father took at that time," but with radiant smile, he responded: "Oh, yes, I remember, I remember," and there was an accentuation of the words which demonstrated to me that these occurrences had often been talked of in the imperial household. I stood on New York Battery, during the war, as I suppose many of you did, looking off through a magnificent glass upon a fleet of Russian ships. "What are they doing there?" I asked, and so everyone asked: "What business have the Russian warships in our New York harbor?" Word came that another fleet of Russian ships was in San Francisco harbor. "What does this mean?" our rulers asked, but got no immediate answer. In these two American harbors, the Russian fleet seemed sound asleep. Their great mouths of iron spoke not a word, and the Russian flag, whether floating in the air or drooping by the flagstaff, made no answer to our inquisitiveness. William H. Seward, secretary of state, asked the Russian minister at Washington the meaning of those Russian ships in American waters, and got no satisfactory response. Admiral Farragut said to a Russian officer after dining in the home of the eminent politician, Thurlow Weed, that maker and unmaker of presidents: "What are you doing here with those Russian vessels of war?" Not until the war was over was it found that in case of foreign intervention all the guns and the last gun of these two fleets in New York and San Francisco harbors were to open in full diapason upon any foreign ship that should dare to interfere with the right of Americans, north and south, to settle their own controversy. But for those fleets and their presence in American waters, there can be no doubt that two of the mightiest nations of Europe would have mingled in our fight. But for those two fleets, the American government would have been today only a name in history. I declare before God and the nation that I believe Russia saved the United States of America.

Last July I stood before a great throng of Russians in the embarrassing position of speaking to an audience three-fourths of which could not understand my language any more than I could understand theirs. But there were two words that they thoroughly understood as well as you understand them, and the utterance of these two names brought forth an acclamation that made the City hall of St. Petersburg quake from foundation stone to tower, and those two names were "George Washington" and "Abraham Lincoln." Now, is it not important that we should feel right toward that mighty, that God-given friend of more than one hundred years? Yea, because it is a nation of more possibilities than any other except our own should we cultivate its friendship. There is a vast realm of Russia as yet unoccupied. If the population of the rest of Europe were poured into Russia, it would be only partially occupied. After a while, America will be so well populated that the tides of emigration will go the other way, and by railroads from Russia at Bering straits—where Asia comes within 36 miles of joining America—millions of people will pour down through Russia and Siberia, and on down through all the regions waiting for the civilization of the next century to come and culture great harvests and build mighty cities. What the United States now are on the Western Hemisphere Russia will be on the Eastern Hemisphere. Not only because of what Russia has been to our republic, but because of what she will be, let us cease the defamation of all that pertains to that great empire. If Russia can afford to be the friend of America, America can afford to be the friend of Russia. And now I proceed to do what I told the emperor and the empress and all the imperial family at the palace of Peterhof I would do if I ever got back to America, and that is to answer some of the calumnies which have been announced and reiterated and stereotyped against Russia.

Calumny the first—The emperor and all the imperial family are in perpetual dread of assassination. They are practically prisoners in the Winter Palace, and trenches with dynamite have been found dug around the Winter Palace. They dare not venture forth except preceded and followed and surrounded by a most elaborate military guard.

My answer to this is that I never saw a face more free from worriment than the emperor's face. The Winter Palace, around which the trenches are said to have been charged with dynamite and in which the imperial family are said to be prisoners, has never been the residence of the imperial family one moment since the present emperor has been on the throne. The Winter Palace has been changed into a museum and a picture gallery and a place of great levees. He spends his summer in the palace at Peterhof, 15 or 20 miles from St. Petersburg; his autumns at the palace at Gatschina, and his winters at a palace at St. Petersburg, but in quite a different part of the city to that occupied by the Winter Palace. He rides through the city unattended except by the empress at his side and the driver on the box.

There is not a person in this audience more free from fear of harm than he is. His subjects not only admire him but almost worship him. There are cranks in Russia, but have we not had our Charles Guiteau and John Wilkes Booth? "But," says one, "did not the Russians kill the father of the present emperor?" Yes, but in the time that Russia has had one assassination of emperor, America has had two presidents assassinated. "But is not the emperor an autocrat?" By which you mean, has he not power without restriction? Yes, but it all depends on what use you make of your power. Are you an autocrat in your factory, or an autocrat in your style of business? It all depends on what use you make of your power, whether to bless or to oppress, and from the time of Peter the Great—that Russian who was the wonder of all time, the emperor who became incognito a ship carpenter that he might help ship carpenters, and a mechanic that he might help mechanics, and put on poor men's garb that he might sympathize with poor men, and who in his last words said: "My Lord, I am dying. Oh, help my unbelief."—I say from that time the throne of Russia has, for the most part, been occupied by rulers as beneficent and kind and sympathetic as they were powerful. To go no further back than Nicholas, the grandfather of the present emperor; Nicholas had for the dominant idea of his administration the emancipation of the serfs. When it was found that he premeditated the freedom of the serfs, he received the following letter of threat from a deputation of noblemen: "Your Imperial Majesty: We learn that the council and senate of the empire have before them for deliberation, with your sanction, the plan to abolish serfdom throughout the Russian empire. We are perfectly willing to abide by your majesty's decision in this matter and to loyally support your will, but there are in Russia a large number of small owners of serfs, who are dependent for actual subsistence on the labor of those serfs and who consequently will be left wholly penniless and without any resource by the operation of emancipation. They will then undoubtedly resort to desperate measures, and in the extremity of their despair, will put the life of your majesty in jeopardy." The emperor replied in words that will last as long as history: "Gentlemen, if I should die because of my devotion to such a cause, I am willing to meet my fate." When, under an attack of pneumonia from exposure to severe weather in the service of his people, that emperor put down his head on the pillow of dust, Russia lost as good a monarch as was ever crowned. Then came Alexander the Second, the father of the present emperor. Amid the mightiest opposition, and innumerable protests, he, with one stroke of his pen, emancipated 20,000,000 serfs, practically saying, "Go free. Be your own masters, and this is for you and your children forever." On the day he was basely assassinated (and I will parenthetically say that I saw his carriage in splinters, as it looked when he stepped from it not to save himself but to look after some poor people of the street who had been hurt, and I saw the bed on which he died, the mattress yet crimson with his life's blood)—on the day he was assassinated he had on his table, found afterward, a free constitution that proposed to give the right of suffrage to the people of Russia. If it had not been for the assassination, he would have soon signed that constitution, but that horrible violence put things back, as violence always does. What a marvelous character of kindness was Alexander the Second, the father of the present emperor, so that the present emperor, Alexander the Third, inherits his benignity.

Alexander the Second, hearing that a nobleman had formed a conspiracy against his life, had him arrested. Then the eyes of the criminal were bandaged, and he was put in a carriage, and for some time traveled on, only stopping for food. After a while the bandage was removed, and supposing that he must, by that time, have been almost in Siberia, found that he was at the door of his own home. But this punishment was sufficient. The same emperor having heard that a poet had written a poem defamatory of his empress, ordered the poet into his presence. Expecting great severity, the poet entered the palace, and found the emperor and empress and dukes and duchesses gathered together. "Good morning," said the emperor to the offender. "I hear you have written a most beautiful poem, and I have sent for you that you may read it to us and we may have the pleasure of hearing it." The man cried out: "Send me to Siberia, or do anything with me, but do not make me read this poem in your presence." He was compelled to read the defamatory poem, and then the empress, against whom it was aimed, said: "I do not think he will write any more verses about us again. Let him go." And so he was freed. And now comes in Alexander the Third, doing the best things possible for the nation which he loves and which ardently loves him. But what an undertaking to rule 112,000,000 people, made up of one hundred tribes and races and speaking forty different languages. But, notwithstanding all this, things there move on marvelously well, and I do not believe that out of five hundred thousand Russians you would find more than one person who dislikes the emperor, and so that calumny of dread of assassination drops so flat it can fall no flatter.

Calumny the second—If you go to Russia, you are under severest espionage, stopped here and questioned there, and in danger of arrest. But my opinion is that if a man is in danger of being disturbed in Russia it is because he ought to be disturbed. Russia is the only country in Europe in which my baggage was not examined. I carried in my hand, tied together with a cord, so that their titles could be seen, a pile of eight or ten books, all of them from lid to lid cursing Russia, but I had no trouble in taking with me the books. There is ten times more difficulty in getting your baggage through the American custom house than through the Russian. I speak not of myself, for friends intercede for me on American wharves, and I am not detained. I was several days in Russia before I was asked if I had any passport at all. Depend upon it if hereafter a man believes he is uncomfortably watched by the police of St. Petersburg or Moscow, it is because there is something suspicious about him, and you yourself had better, when he is around, look after your silver spoons. I promise you, an honest man or an honest woman, that when you go there, as many of you will, for European travel is destined to change its course from southern Europe to those northern regions, you will have no more molestation or supervisal than in Brooklyn or in New York or the quietest Long Island village.

Calumny the third—Russia and its ruler are so opposed to any other religion except the Greek religion that they will not allow any other religion, and nothing but persecution and imprisonment and outrage intolerable await the disciples of any other religion. But what are the facts? I had a long ride in St. Petersburg and its suburbs with the perfect, a brilliant, efficient and lovely man, who is the highest official in the city of St. Petersburg, whose chief business is to attend the emperor. I said to him: "I suppose your religion is that of the Greek church?" "No," he said, "I am a Lutheran." "What is your religion?" I said to one of the highest and most influential officials at St. Petersburg. He said: "I am of the Church of England." Myself, an American, of still another denomination of Christians, and never having been inside a Greek church in my life until I went to Russia, could not have received more consideration had I been baptized in the Greek church and all my life worshiped at her altars. I had it demonstrated to me very plainly that a man's religion in Russia has nothing to do with his preferment for either office or social position. The only questions taken into such consideration are honesty, fidelity, morality, and adaptation. I had not been in St. Petersburg an hour before I received an invitation to preach the gospel of Christ as I believed it. Besides all this, have you forgotten that the Crimean war, which shook the earth, grew out of Russia's interference in behalf of the persecuted Christians of all nations in Turkey? "But," says someone, "have there not been persecutions of other religions in Russia?" No doubt, just as in other times in New England we burned witches and as we killed Quakers and as the Jews in America have been outrageously treated ever since I can remember, and the Chinese in our land have been pelted, and their stores torn down, and their way from the steamer wharf to their destined quarters tracked with their own blood. The devil of persecution is in every land and in all ages. Some of us in the different denominations of Christians in America have felt the thrust of persecution, because we thought differently from those who would, if they had the power, put us in a furnace eight times heated, one more degree of caloric than Nebuchadnezzar's. Persecutions in all lands, but the emperor of Russia sanctions none of them. I had a most satisfactory talk with the emperor about the religions of the world, and he thinks and feels as you and I do, that a religion is something between a man and his God, and no one has a right to interfere with it. You may go right up to St. Petersburg and Moscow with your Episcopal liturgy or your Presbyterian catechism or your Congregationalist's liberalism or your Immersionist's Baptistry, or any other religion, and if you mind your own affairs and let others mind theirs, you will not be molested.

Calumny the fourth—Russia is so very grasping of territory and she seems to want the world. But what are the facts? During the last century and a quarter the United States have taken possession of everything between the thirteen colonies and the Pacific ocean, and England, during the same length of time, has taken possession of nearly 3,000,000 square miles, and by the extent of her domain has added 250,000,000 population, while Russia has added during that time only one-half of the number of square miles and about 18,000,000 of population—England's advance of domain by 250,000,000 against Russia's advance of domain by 18,000,000. What a paltry Russian advance by 18,000,000 as compared with English advance of domain by 250,000,000! The United States and England had better keep still about extravagant and extortionate enlargement of domain.

Calumny the fifth—Siberia is a den of horrors, and to-day people are driven like dumb cattle; no trial is afforded the suspected ones; they are put into quicksilver mines, where they are whipped and starved and some day find themselves going around without any head. Some of them do not get so far as Siberia. Women, after being tied to stakes in the streets, are disrobed and whipped to death in the presence of howling mobs. Offenders hear their own flesh siss under the hot irons.

But what are the facts? There are no kinder people on the earth than the Russians, and to most of them cruelty is an impossibility. I hold in my hand a card. You see on it that red circle. That is the government's seal on a card giving me permission to visit all the prisons of St. Petersburg, as I had expressed a wish in that direction. As the messenger handed the card to me, he told me that a carriage was at the door for my disposal in visiting the prisons. It so happened, however, that I was crowded with engagements and I could not make the visitation. Do you suppose such cheerful permission and a carriage to boot would have been afforded me if the prisons of Russia are such hells on earth as they have been described to be? I asked an eminent and distinguished American: "Have you visited the prisons of St. Petersburg, and how do they differ from American prisons?" He replied: "I have visited them, and they are as well ventilated and as well conditioned in every respect as the majority of the prisons of America." Are women whipped in the streets? No; that statement comes from the manufactory of fabrication, a manufactory that runs day and night, so that the supply may meet the demand.

But how about Siberia? My answer is Siberia is the prison of Russia, a prison more than twice the size of the United States. John Howard, who did more for the improvement of prisoners and the reformation of criminals than any man who ever lived, his name a synonym for mercy throughout Christendom, declared by voice and pen that the system of transportation of criminals from Russia to Siberia was an admirable plan, advocating open-air punishment rather than endungeonment, and also because it was taking all offenders hundreds of miles away from their evil companions. John Howard, after witnessing the plan of deportation of criminals from Russia to Siberia, commended it to England. If a man commits murder in Russia he is not electrocuted as we electrocute him, or choked to death by a halter as we choke him to death. Russia is the only country on earth from which the death penalty has been driven, except in the case of high treason. Murderers and desperate villains are sent to the hardest parts of Siberia, but no man is sent to Siberia or doomed to any kind of punishment in Russia until he has had a fair trial. So far as their being hustled off in the night and not knowing why they are exiled or punished is concerned, all the criminals in Russia have an open trial before a jury just as we have in America, except in revolutionary or riotous times, and you know in America at such times the writ of habeas corpus is suspended. There are in Russia grand juries and petit juries and the right to challenge the jurors, and the prisoner confronts his accuser, and mark this, as in no other country, after a prisoner has been condemned by juries and judges he may appeal to the minister of the interior, and after that to the senate, and after that to the emperor, who is constantly pardoning.

As I said, the violent and murderous are sent to the hardest part of Siberia, but the more moderate criminals to the more propitious parts of Siberia, and those who have only a little criminality to parts of Siberia positively genial for climate, for you ought to know, if you do not know, that Siberia is so large and wide and long that it reaches from frigidity to torridity, from almost arctic blast to climate as mild as that of Italy. Run your finger along the map of the world, and you will find that the lowest part of Siberia is on the forty-fifth degree of latitude, and the richest part of Italy is on the same forty-fifth degree of latitude. So that Siberia reaches from the furs at the north to the palm leaf fans at the south. It has been demonstrated that 90 per cent. of the Russian criminals colonized into Siberia go into a climate milder than New York—a land songful with birds and embroidered with flora enough manifold to confound the botanists. Much of the soil is a rich loam and harvests wait for a plow to liberate them. When a criminal is sent to Siberia, in the vast majority of cases it gives him an opportunity to make a new start under the best possible circumstances. The criminal is allowed to take his or her family along, and that is a mercy no other country grants. In the quicksilver mines of Siberia, the hardest place of expatriation, only one-fourth of the miners are criminals. The other three-fourths go there because they choose it as a place to earn their living.

After being in Siberia a while, the condemned go to earning a livelihood, and they come to own their own farms, and orchards and vineyards, many of these people coming to wealth, and thousands of them under no inducement would leave those parts of Siberia which are paradises for salubrity and luxuriance. Now, which do you think is the best style of a prison—Siberia or many of our American prisons? When a man commits a big crime in our country, the judge looks into the frightened face of the culprit and says: "You have been found guilty; I sentence you to the penitentiary for ten years." He goes to prison. He is shut in between four walls. No sunlight. No fresh air. No bathroom. Before he has served his ten years, he dies of consumption, or is so enervated that for the rest of his life he sits with folded hands a wheezing invalid. In preference to the shut-in life of the average American prisoner, give me Siberia. Beside that when offenders come out of prison in America, what chance have they? Ask the poorly supported societies, formed to get these people work. Ask me to whom the newly liberated come from all the prisons, imploring what they shall do. No one will commend them. The pallor of incarceration is on their cheek. Who wants to employ in factory or store a man or woman who, in answer to the question, "Where did you live last?" should make for reply: "State's prison at Auburn or Moyamensing." Now in Siberia you have a better chance. They are never spoken of as criminals, but as unfortunates, and they are allowed every opportunity of retrieving their lost reputation and lost fortunes.

I talked with the president of the National society of Russia for the education and moralization of the children of Siberian convicts. The president of that society, appointed by the emperor, is a lady of great accomplishments, and much sympathy, which illumines her face and makes tearful her eyes and tremulous her voice. The evening I passed at her house in St. Petersburg was one of the memorable events of my lifetime. I will not attempt to pronounce the name of that noble woman appointed by the emperor as the president of the National society of Russia for the education and moralization of the children of convicts. Please to name any such national society in our country, supported by government, for taking care of the children of convicts. You know, if you know anything, that there is no chance in this country for a man who has been imprisoned, or for his children. God pity them and hasten the time when we shall, by some national institution established by the congress of the United States, imitate the mercy of the Russian government toward the innocent children of imprisoned offenders. He who charges cruelty on the imperial family and the nobility of Russia belies men and women as gracious and benignant as ever breathed oxygen.

The merciful character of the present emperor was well illustrated in the following occurrence: The man who supervised the assassination of the father of the present emperor, standing in the snow that awful day, when the dynamite shattered to pieces the legs of Alexander the Second—I say the man who supervised all this fled from St. Petersburg and quit Russia. But after a while the man repented of his crime, and wrote to the emperor asking for forgiveness for the murder of his father and promising to be a good citizen, and asking if he might come back to Russia. The emperor pardoned the murderer of his father, and the forgiven assassin is now living in Russia, unless recently deceased. When I talked to the empress concerning the sympathy felt in America for the sufferings of the drought-struck regions of Russia, she evinced an absorbing interest and a compassion and an emotion of manner and speech such as we men can hardly realize, because it seems that God has reserved for woman as her great adornment the coronet, the tear-jeweled coronet of tenderness and commiseration. If you say that it was a man, a divine man that came to save the world, I say yes, but it was a woman that gave the man. Witness all the Madonnas, Italian, German, English and Russian, that bloom in the picture galleries of Christendom. Son of Mary, have mercy on us!

But how about the knout, the cruel Russian knout, that comes down on the bare back of agonized criminals? Why, Russia abolished the knout before it was abolished from our American navy. But how about the political prisoners hustled off to Siberia? According to the testimony of the most celebrated literary enemy of Russia, only 443 political prisoners were sent to Siberia in twenty years. How many political prisoners did we put in prison pens during our four years of civil war? Well, I guess at least one hundred thousand. America's 100,000 political prisoners versus Russia's 443 political prisoners. Nearly all these 443 of 20 years were noblemen or people desperately opposed to the emancipation of the serfs. And none of the political prisoners are sent to the famous Kara mines. For the most part you are dependent for information upon the testimony of prisoners who are sent to Siberia. They all say they were innocent. Prisoners always innocent. Ask all the prisoners of America to-day, "Guilty or not guilty?" and 19 out of 20 will plead, "Not guilty." Ask them how they like their prison and how they like sheriffs and how they like the government of the United States, and you will find these prisoners admire the authority that arrested them and punished them just about as much as the political prisoners of Russia like Siberia.

But you ask, how will this Russophobia, with which so many have been bitten and poisoned, be cured? By the God of Justice blessing such books and pamphlets as are now coming out from Prof. de Arnaud, of Washington; Mr. Horace Cutter, of San Francisco; Mr. Morfill, of England, and by the opening of our American gates to the writings of some twenty-four of the Russian authors and authoresses, in some respects as brilliant as the three or four Russian authors already known—the translation of those twenty-four authors, which I am authorized from Russia to offer free of charge to any responsible American publishing house that will do them justice. Let these Russians tell their own story for they are the only ones fully competent to do the work as none but Americans can fully tell the story of America, and as none but Germans can fully tell the story of Germany, and none but Englishmen can fully tell the story of England, and none but Frenchmen can fully tell the story of France. Meanwhile, let the international defamation come to an end. Cease to speak evil of dignities merely because they are dignities, and of presidents merely because they are presidents, and of emperors merely because they are emperors. And may the blessing of God the father, and God the Son and God the Holy Ghost, be upon all the members of the imperial household of Russia from the illustrious head of that family down to the princess, seven years of age, who came skipping into my presence in the palace of Peterhof last summer. Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will to men.

MARKETS OF THE WORLD

Wheat Receipts Still Small in Toledo.

English Markets Dull and Unchanged.

A Review of the Trade Situation for the Sole Benefit of Those Who Read the Busy Bee.

The receipts of wheat at Toledo to-day are 6,958 bus. less than on the corresponding Tuesday in 1891.

The receipts of wheat to-day at seven western points are 395,275 bus. less than in 1891. The northwest receipts are 244,056 bus. less, and at five other western points 151,219 bus. less than in 1891.

It is the old story. A twice or thrice told tale fretting the drowsy ear. We have nothing to say and therefore we proceed to say it. There is no change in the markets for wheat in this country, or around the world, that is in the least significant. Stocks are ample everywhere, and although the winter wheat movement seems to have expended its force, the northwest continues to send out their surplus in a very liberal way. That movement is now less than last year—see our analysis herein—but if it were not. With all the previous plentiful supplies we should be drained out. The export movement continues fair, but it is generally more than half flour, and of wheat the country continues to accumulate week by week. But markets have held steady to-day with very limited variations in price, and close about where they did yesterday.

Corn has also shown great steadiness and closing prices represent no change of note.

Oats have been a shade weaker, but the change is not worth considering.

In New York November wheat closed at 76 3-8, December 76 7-8c and May at 83 3-4c, a loss of 1-8c on each. November corn closed at 50 1-2c and May at 52 7-8c, a loss on each of 1-4c. December oats at 36c, a loss of 1-8c.

In Chicago November wheat closed at 71 7-8c, a gain of an 1-8c. December at 72 1-2c and May at 78 3-4c, unchanged. November corn at 41 7-8c. December at 41 7-8c, a loss on each of 1-8c. May unchanged at 47 1-8c. December oats at 31 1-4c, a loss of 1-4c.

In Toledo business in wheat futures has been more active. Prices were a shade better at opening, but the market eased off and closing prices are unchanged as compared with yesterday. THE DONER TRIAL.

Endeavor to Get a Jury in Progress.

The First Panel Will Probably Not Suffice—Laywers Battling as the Bee Goes to Press.

The Doner trial was continued from yesterday afternoon until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

As was stated in last evening's Bee, Judge Harmon ordered that 12 jurors be drawn from box. Accordingly County Clerk Bronson and Sheriff Stuart appeared in open court and drew 12 slips from the box, upon which were written the following names:

Matthew Seyfang—Fourth ward.
J. E. Greiner—Second ward.
Louis Van Noorden—Seventh ward.
N. Gardner—Oregon township.
C. W. Counter—First ward.
M. Landis—Ninth ward.
C. N. Culver—Oregon township.
E. D. Scrafford—First ward.
H. B. Lovett—Eighth ward.
Fred Cummerow—Fourth ward.
S. S. Smith—Sylvania.
M. T. Huntley—Sixth ward.

After the jurors had been drawn, Judge Harmon stated that he had been thinking the matter over, and had concluded that it would be irregular to make a draft of jurors to fill a panel, and that it would be best to issue a special venire. This was done, made returnable at 2 o'clock to-day.

At 2 o'colck to-day court convened in Judge Harmon's room, and Clerk Prue called the following jurors, summoned by special venire, to fill the panel: Charles T. Gurlack, Michael Kurscher, Wm. W. Dixon, Marshal Plumadare.

The state proceeded to the preliminary examination of the members of the jury, touching their qualification as jurors.

The state submitted a challenge as to J. W. Potts, one of the regular jurors, and he was excused. Geo. Van Wormer was next called.

Hathaway was similarly dismissed and Peter Cranker was called. H. C. Bay was also dismissed and Calvin Holmes was called.

George Bowen, a regular, was dismissed and Wm. A. Surles was called.

Mr. Barber will conduct the prosecution alone, while Mr. Ritchie will defend Mr. Doner single-handed.

CAR FAMINE.

Elevators Full and No Way to Move the Grain.

Sioux City, Ia., Nov. 22.—Reports from grain shippers in South Dakota indicate that the car famine, which was thought to have ended three weeks ago, is agin making itself felt and now bids fair to surpass in extent that of recent date.

All the elevators and grain houses are stated to be crowded to the fullest capacity, and thousands of buushels of wheat are loaded in wagons for lack of a better place of storage.

Railroad officials say it is impossible to provide cars as fast as wanted. On the Chicago & Northwestern over 500 cars have been distributed in the last few days on one division, and the movement effected but little relief.

Dyspepsia in all forms not only relieved but cured by Simmons Liver Regulator.

W. P. REND

On How to Treat Workmen Justly.

He Is a Witness in the Homestead Strike Investigation at Chicago.

W. P. Rend, the well-known coal operator, who is interested with G. G. Hadley in the Phenix Coal company and other Toledo institutions, was the first witness to show up yesterday in the senatorial investigation being conducted by Senators Gallinger and Peffer into the Homestead strike, in Chicago. Mr. Rend gave the committee a bit of his mind on the subject of labor disputes generally, and threw the opinion in an off-hand way that the problem between capital and labor would never be solved.

"This investigation will end as all others have ended," said Mr. Rend. "Gentlemen, unless you are the wisest body of men God ever created, you need hardly expect to do much toward the settlement of this question."

This was in the course of an informal conversation before he was sworn. After being put on oath the witness said he had been in the coal mining business for 20 years, and employed in this and the sale of coal about 2,000 men. "I have always endeavored in my dealings with my men to avoid strikes and lockouts. I have found that the conditions are so varied that a formula that would work well at one time would be utterly worthless at another. The best way to deal with men is to treat them in a spirit of justice and conciliation. An employer owes his workmen not only fair wages, but the owes them sympathy in their struggles as his fellow-men, and a fair consideration of their grievances."

Mr. Rend then told of a conference that took place six years ago in Chicago between the Miners' National union and the mining employers throughout the country. That was the first step that had been taken up to that time to bring the employers and workmen together to discuss the question of averting strikes. That conference threatened to be a failure, but by a personal canvass a number of operators were induced to attend the meeting, and a second conference was arranged a few weeks afterward at Pittsburg. A month later in Columbus, O., all the coal mine owners of Ohio, western Pennsylvania, Indiana, and part of Illinois were brought together, and the question of avoiding strikes was thoroughly discussed. Owing to the difference in the kinds of mining fixing a uniform scale of wages was impossible, but different scales of wages were fixed for different localities, and this revised scale worked well for two years, and harmony prevailed. This interstate arrangement was broken by the operators of northern Illinois, who claimed that they were paying too high prices. This brought on the strike of three years ago. Western Pennsylvania also broke away from the agreement last year, and only Ohio keeps to the agreement of six years ago.

"In Ohio the turbulent element has come to the front," said Mr. Rend, "and there has been an encroachment on the rights of the employers which threatens to make trouble. But these men are being held in check by their leaders. I believe that nine out of every ten of the strikes that take place could be averted if only a spirit of mutual conciliation prevailed."

In reply to Senator Gallinger, Mr. Rend said he believed the methods employed at his mines would, if applied in manufacturing concerns, prevent strikes. He said he did not believe in the employment of private detectives as spies to find out the intentions of workmen. "I do not believe that any kind of interstate arbitration can be established by law," said the witness. "It would lead to communism. Compulsory arbitration would place the interests of the employers in the hands of demagogues, and that would lead to anarchy. I believe in voluntary arbitration, but not in a compulsory law on the subject."

A SAD CASE.

People Hardly Know What Their Neighbors Suffer.

Norwalk, Nov. 22.—(Special.)—A sad case of destitution and want comes to Norwalk friends from C. B. Love, a former well known Norwalk resident, who resides at Woodford, Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory.

He and his family are without food and sufficient clothing, their sole article of food being corn which they grind in a coffee mill, being unable to pay for the grinding at the mill.

His daughter Susie taught school and had to take for her pay six head of cattle, which she could not ship out of the nation, it being contrary to the laws of the Chickasaws.

The family cup of sorrow is filled to overflowing by the daughter being taken sick and is now lying at death's door. The doctors have abandoned all hope and efforts will be made by Norwalk people to relieve the distress of these people.

THE BRONSON WILL CASE

Now on Hearing in Common Pleas Court.

Heirs of One of the Wealthiest Estates in Toledo Seeking its Control.

The Bronson will contest case was taken up at 2 o'clock this afternoon, before Judge Lemmon in common pleas court.

The suit was filed by the heirs of Calvin Bronson, deceased, against Col. Neubert, trustee.

The provisions of the will bequeathed all of the property to Col. Neubert, as trustee, vesting him with absolute control of the property of the estate, valued at about $900,000.

The heirs seek to have the will set aside on the ground that the deceased was not mentally capable of directing the final disposition of the estate.

The defense alleges that he was, and on this issue the contest will be made.

A struck jury was called when court assembled and counsel proceeded to the examination.

SLOWLY DYING.

The Governor's Father Nearing the Great White Throne.

Canton, O., Nov. 22.—The death of William McKinley, Sr., is momentarily expected. Sunday was an extremely bad day, and by midnight his left side was partially paralyzed. He has control of his mental faculties and recognizes the various members of his family as they stand about his bedside.

Sunday his son Abner arrived from New York city, and Mrs. McKinley, the wife of the governor, arrived from Columbus. She had a trying trip. Being a confirmed invalid, the news of her father-in-law's condition was a great shock, and two maids were required to escort her here.

Shortly after leaving Coshocton the forward trucks of the car in which she was lying broke. Fortunately a wreck was averted. The death of Mr. McKinley is looked for before midnight. In his youth he broke a leg, but since then has hardly known a sick day.

Hon. James Melvin entertained his Sunday school class of thirteen boys between 12 and 13 years of age, at supper last Friday evening. Recitations, readings and a happy reunion were enjoyed.

Mrs. Tom Campbell planned a very pleasant surprise, in the way of a stag party for her husband last evening, in honor of his birthday. Twenty-four friends were present and the evening was pleasantly spent.

DR. L. L. CARMER.

Stricken Down with Heart Disease.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

GENTLEMEN: I feel it my duty, as well as a pleasure, to publish, unsolicited, to the world the benefit received from DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE REMEDIES. I was stricken down with Heart Disease and its complications, a rapid pulse varying from 90 to 140 beats per minute, a choking or burning sensation in the wind pipe, oppression in the chest, much pain in the region of the heart and below lower rib, pain in the arms, shortness of breath, sleeplessness, weakness and general debility. The arteries in my neck would throb violently, the throbbing of my heart could be heard across a large room and would shake my whole body. I was so nervous that I could not hold my hand steady. I have been under the treatment of eminent physicians, and have taken gallons of Patent Medicine without the least benefit. A friend recommended your remedies. She was cured by Dr. Miles' remedies. I have taken three bottles of your New Heart Cure and two bottles Nervine. My pulse is normal, I have no more violent throbbing of the heart. I AM A WELL MAN. I sincerely recommend every one with symptoms of Heart Disease to take Dr. Miles' Restorative Remedies and be cured.

You Needn't Look immediately for the damage that dangerous washing compounds do. It's there, and it's going on all the time, but you won't see its effects, probably, for several months. It wouldn't do, you know, to have them too dangerous.

The best way is to take no risk. You needn't worry about damage to your clothes, if you keep to the original washing compound—Pearline; first made and fully proved. What can you gain by using the imitations of it? Prize packages, cheaper prices, or whatever may by urged for them, wouldn't pay you for one ruined garment.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled; if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 346 JAMES PYLE, New York.

THE CONFERENCE.

Catholicism Not Against Public Schools.

Result of the Great Meeting in New York.

Archbishop Ireland Has Carried the Day.

Children to Get Their Religion on Sunday.

On Other Days They Can Go to Such Schools as Their Parents Think Proper.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 22.—The full developments of the meeting of the Catholic archbishops in New York are anxiously awaited here where they are matters of much concern and conjecture in Catholic circles.

The arrival at home of Cardinal Gibbons has given new impetus to the discussion of what decisions may have been reached at the New York conference.

The friends of Archbishop Ireland believe the dawn of a new era in the history of the Catholic church is at hand, and already they see the daylight of liberalism in education breaking over the tops of the hills of ultra-religious objection.

The authority for this belief is the report of the prelates—a short, seemingly "nothing in it" statement, which, however, when examined closely, considered carefully and read between the lines, is seen to be one of the most important pronouncements ever made by the hierarchy of the Catholic church in America.

This is all the more remarkable when the decided opposition of a number of the archbishops to the school plan of Archbishop Ireland is considered.

There were among the prelates and their suffragans those who had declared themselves unequivocally for the parochial school system.

There were priests who favored a prohibition against Catholic children attending public schools under pain of ecclesiastical censure—in short, for compulsory attendance of Catholic schools.

These clergymen had expressed their opinions from the chancel and in some parts of the country made little if any provision for the religious education of the children attending public schools.

Their views were known to the archbishops and were diametrically opposed to the policy marked out by Archbishop Ireland in the conduct of educational methods in his archdiocese.

He gave the Fairbault system existence and against the hue and cry of opposition from this country and in Rome, where the strongest sort of influences were brought to bear to have his theories condemned, the pope indorsed the archbishops acumen and Catholicity by allowing the Fairbault plan to be tolerated.

This meant that there was nothing pernicious in the system to the interests of the Catholic church in the United States.

It meant that the pope, after receiving Cardinal Gibbons' indorsement of Archbishop Ireland's ideas, had abiding faith in that prelate's ability to take care of his own affairs.

The news was bitter in some quarters but there was nothing left but to acknowledge that the liberalists had carried their point.

Pure and simple, the report, while not saying so in so many words, is an indorsement of the progressive policy in educational matters advanced by the liberal Catholic party, led by Cardinal Gibbons and his brilliant lieutenant, Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul.

The influences of these two prelates have marked themselves indelibly upon the character of the Catholic church in this land, and in no way more prominently, say their friends here, than in the adoption of this brief parochial school report, which was accepted unanimously by the assembled archbishops and without one dissenting vote, was ordered to be given to the public.

A second resolution of the report is considered the important feature. The point the friends of Archbishop Ireland make with regard to this is that there is no condemnation of the public schools; on the contrary special provision is to be made in Sunday schools and by special instruction for the care of those children who attend public schools.

This resolution is held to likewise contain a "dig" at those priests who make no effort to have the public school children of their parish educated in the religion. It tells them plainly that they must look out for the religious welfare of these children.

Here is the ground upon which the liberalists claim victory. If the public schools are not condemned—if, on the contrary they are tolerated, as shown by the report of the archbishops, in directing provision to be made for the religious training of the children then there is no wrong in a Catholic child attending the public schools, argue the liberalists, so long as his religious instruction is not neglected.

Speculation is wide as to the influences that affected the opponents of Archbishop Ireland in the meeting to permit a report to be adopted which could be construed in this manner.

One eminent Catholic authority stated yesterday that it was simply a sensible act of refusing to make "a sin where no sin existed." Others are inclined to believe that the decision of the pope in the Faribault controversy, clearly indicating his sympathy with the liberalists, had its effect upon the minds of the archbishops.

There is a strong belief that he sent Archbishop Satolli to this country to emphasize his sympathy with the liberalists, and that when the latter hands in his report on the condition of the Catholic church in the United States it will be the tombstone on the grave of the opponents of Archbishop Ireland.

TO BENEFIT FORLORN BABIES.

Many Attend the Souvenir Tea Party Given by St. James' Creche.

St. James' parish house was perfumed with flowers yesterday afternoon and evening and a great number of coaches were drawn up on Huron street, all for the sake of some hundreds of forlorn babies in whom the richest of the episcopalian churches takes an interest. The affair was a souvenir tea party for the benefit of St. James' creche. The creche used to have its home on one of the upper floors of the parish house, but those rooms became too small and not long ago a move was made to more commodious quarters in Superior street, where the directors of the enterprise can care for the 500 babies who every year are the jolly guests of this well-handled nursery. The tea was under the direction of Mrs. Perry H. Smith, and she was helped by the many prominent society women who are the parishioners of Floyd Tompkins, Jr.

The tables were exquisitely arranged and prettier displays of flowers and china could not be fancied. Mrs. J. S. Runnels was in charge of the flower room to the right of the hall and was helped by Miss Jones, Miss Helen Jones, Mrs. Erskine and Miss Winston. Back of the flower room was a bonbon table and a Christmas tree hung with bonbons, where Mrs. Arthur Aldis, Miss Sturgis, Mrs. Stanton and Mrs. Erskine handled the pretty souvenirs. Upstairs tea and cake tables were under the care of Mrs. Henry Bishop, Mrs. H. H. Porter, Mrs. Robert North, Mrs. T. A. Sawyer, Mrs. Robert W. Hunt, Mrs. William Sturgiss, Mrs. Ed Ayer, Mrs. Andisdel, Mrs. Skinner, Mrs. Barnard and Mrs. Macdonald. Every table was arranged with skill and the whole scene was charming and, better still, of profit to the creche. Mrs. Rozet and Miss Rozet presided at the lemonade table and Mrs. Jewett made an especially delicate show of fine china. The little fair lasted from 3 to 6 and from 8 to 10 p. m.

St. Mary's catholic church, of Evanston, is conducting a fair at the new school house on Oak avenue, Evanston, which began last night and will continue throughout the week. The hall is profusely decorated in flowers and American flags, and at the various booths many fancy articles are on sale. A considerable sum is also derived from the sale of refreshments. The fair was largely patronized last night.

HE HAS CROSSED THE BAR.

(Alfred, Lord Tennyson, Died Oct. 6, 1892)

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark;

For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

—Tennyson, 1889.

WISE WOMEN.

They Are All the More Attractive and Charming Because They Are Wise and Sensible.

Who is a wise woman? She is one who knows herself, knows what she requires, and governs herself accordingly. She may realize that she is not so young as formerly, that possibly her complexion is not so fine, her health so good, but if she is a wise woman, she takes steps to preserve her health, keep her complexion and remain rosy and bright, even with advancing years. It is true she cannot do this unaided; it is true that she needs assistance and requires "a friend in need." That friend must be something that can restore all these fading qualities; it must be some gentle stimulant taken in moderation. But what? There is but one. The only medical stimulant which is specially designed for ladies is Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. These are not idle words, but truths which have been proved by the happiness and health of thousands of women in all parts of America. Prominent ladies admit this, and they do not hesitate to say that as a medicinal stimulant Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is a godsend to any woman. It is the realization of these things that makes the wise; it is the neglect of these things that constitutes the foolish woman. It should be carefully borne in mind, however, that no other whiskey is medicinal or furnishes the qualities required for preserving the life and bringing health.

This is too early ordinarily for a cut price sale, but we own these goods at less than ordinary prices.

Large invoices have been sent to us during the last few days by leading tailors from the east, which, under ordinary circumstances, would be more than we could dispose of, but the prices were so ridiculously low that we were almost forced to receive them, knowing that the prices at which we could and are now offering these goods would dispose of this surplus stock in a very short time. We can fit any size or shape, as they were cut for normal, lean, stout or extra size men.
